'STRAW WOMAN' TRIAL CHARGE

For the British Martial Law in Georgia
New York Needs Money
Spiritualism and Mediums

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

The British yacht won yesterday after the American boat had led during the first half of the race. A majority of citizens will congratulate the British heartily and not grudge them a victory that has been delayed for more than 80 years.

Following races may upset this first decision. And if they do many Americans will regret it, much as they wish success for any American undertaking.

But, if the cup must go, it is a pity the plucky old Irishman, Sir Thomas Lipton, could not have "lifted" it. He deserved success.

Georgia wants her textile mills to keep on running, or, at least, seems disposed to protect mill owners and any employes willing to work.

Mediation having failed, or been rejected, bayonets are ordered out, and martial law is declared.

New York City must feed 400,000 and more hungry families, also pay their gas, light and rent bills.

The city has been paying out $17,000,000 a month, or at the rate of $204,000,000 a year, almost half what it cost to run the whole national government before the big war started.

The problem "how to continue getting the money" has been temporarily solved by a three-cornered agreement between the mayor and board of aldermen. Business in New York City will pay a "relief tax" of one tenth of one per cent. Those that pay income tax to the national government will pay to New York City relief 15 per cent of what they pay the government.

The world's richest city will also organize a public lottery, and invite citizens to gamble, profits to help public relief.

Business, already sufficiently worried, will be taxed, income tax payers will be taxed a little more, and the city will go into the gambling business.

Courts, local and national, may have something to say about the gambling proposal, for state and national constitutions forbid gambling. The poor must be relieved, but it is a pity it could not be done without wholesale manufacture of gamblers. There were enough already.

Those accustomed to sneer at spiritualism and its "mediums" will learn with surprise, from reports made to the British Society for Psychical Research, that the medium is constructed, in some cases, in a manner pecu-

LOST BABY SOUGHT IN R. I. SWAMP

Richmond, R. I., Sept. 18—The storm-swept, swampy woodlands surrounding this small town today were the scene of a widening, fearsome search for a curly-haired, two-year-old baby—missing nearly 24 hours.

Barefoot and clad only in a light summer dress, Nancy Marshall—"just two"—was the object of a posse hunt, led by the state troopers, that was carried on through the night and redoubled in energy at daybreak.

State police sent to Connecticut for bloodhounds as the morning search failed to add anything to the negative results of the night.

FEAR CHILD'S LIFE

Although searchers fear Nancy wandered into the woods and perhaps perished in the severe storm last night, kidnaping and hit-and-run theories were also given consideration as hours passed without any trace of the baby.

The storm during which the child vanished raged during the night and left great pools on the nearby swamps, which are overgrown with a tangle of brush and briar-vines. Searchers fear the little girl may have stumbled in the darkness into one of these.

A dozen state troopers, reinforced by members of the American Legion, tramped through the wet woods all night with lanterns, calling the chid's name.

WOODS RANSACKED

At Nancy's home, in Carolina

Bell, Sued by Women, Ends Life

Springfield, Sept. 18—Clinton E. Bell, 63, prominent attorney, killed himself here today.

Within the past eight months he had been called upon in two suits to give an accounting of more than a million dollars in his trust.

Bell took his life during the absence of his family on vacation by inhaling carbon monoxide fumes from his car in the garage attached to his home at 395 Union street.

PENNED THREE NOTES

A maid found his body. Three notes found were taken by Medical Examiner Charles J. Downey, who would not disclose their nature. Dr. Downey made a report of suicide.

Bell was named defendant last January in an equity suit brought by his sister-in-law, Lady Lucie McMillan of Nairobi, East Africa, who demanded an accounting of her estate of $1,373,400, of which he was American manager.

She accused him of mismanagement and misappropriation. An agreement was reached out of court and a court order based upon it decreed that Bell should pay Lady McMillan $70,000.

ANOTHER WOMAN SUED

In July, another Nairobi resident, Mrs. Louisa R. Decker, petitioned in federal court in Boston to restrain Bell from disposing of her $25,000 estate. She charged he had failed to turn her property over to a New York bank in accordance with her orders.

Bell is survived by his widow and a daughter, Mrs. Duncan Avery Johnston of Kenya Colony, British East Africa.

He was active in the fight for repeal of prohibition and prominent in affairs of the Constitutional Liberty League.

Gannett Choice of G.O.P. Leaders

Albany, Sept. 18 (INS)—Frank E. Gannett, Rochester publisher, has been offered the nomination for the U. S. Senate by a group of Republican leaders, and has tentatively accepted, it was learned today.

If Gannett, who owns a string of newspapers, is nominated he will oppose U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland scheduled to be renominated by the Democrats.

Fall River Mills Plan Test of Ely Edict

Massachusetts was the center of interest on the national textile front today as Fall River planned a test of Governor Ely's declaration that state protection should be given mills where a majority of employes want to work.

Fall River, as a city, was expected to request national guard troops to "cover" the reopening of its closed plants.

Employes of the Ellis mills in Monson, who have voted in favor of returning to work, are also preparing a petition in line with the governor's promise, made yesterday at Springfield.

The governor found himself between two lines of fire when the New England Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners appointed a delegation to call on him and seek his promise that the militia would not be used.

Mill owners believe, however,

CHALLENGER WINS SECOND VICTORY

Aboard U. S. C. G. Cutter Argo, off Newport, R. I., Sept. 18—Endeavour, the British challenger, made it two straight and two up today in the America Cup yacht series by again defeating Rainbow, the American defender. To take the cup, Endeavour must win two more races, a total of four.

Endeavour finished 51 seconds ahead of Rainbow.

This was a course record.

By TOM HORGAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard U. S. C. G. Cutter Argo, off Newport, Sept. 18—Endeavour, British challenger for the America's Cup, today appeared on her way to a second successive victory over the American defender Rainbow, as she rounded the 20-mile mark of the 30-mile triangular course at 1:53:36, well ahead of the American sloop.

Rainbow turned the mark at 1:00.10, a minute, 34 seconds behinds the British boat.

She had increased her margin in the 10-mile beat to windward by a minute 29 seconds on a leg where Rainbow was thought to have the advantage in sailing.

It was a close reach home now.

U. S. Guards Asked for Chelsea Vote

A request for a detail of deputy U. S. marshals to guard the polls in Chelsea on Thursday was received by Marshal John J. Murphy at the Federal building today.

Marshal Murphy declined to identify the person who had sought the guards, but he said that he was considering the request.

Because of Senate and Congress contests, the marshal has the right to detail his deputies to any polling booth.

Marshal Murphy said that if he decides to send men to Chelsea that he will have to recruit a detail of nearly 100 men and swear them in as special deputies.

Breakfast Coffee Antidote for Love

Hearts may break, says Dancer Lucille Ballantine, but life goes on—and breakfast coffe doesn't lose its fragrance. Alleged fickleness of her one-time admirer, Wall Street plunger Jesse Livermore, turned love's skies gray for the fair Lucille. But with tears in her eyes she dances still. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Dancer Here Reveals Livermore Romance

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Dark-haired and saucer-eyed, Lucille Ballantine, Broadway dancer and ex-heart of Jesse L. Livermore, Wall Street plunger, crossed her pajama-clad attractive limbs, sat tailor-fashion on the bed and with a shrug of her shapely shoulders, said stoically:

"It is better to have loved and lost J. L., than never to have loved him at all."

The pretty dancer has a $150 a month claim against the one-time millionaire stock manipulator that is almost lost in Livermore's $6,000,000 mountain of debts.

"GOOD SPORT"

But about this as well as about her lost romance with him, Miss Ballantine is being "a good sport," she says.

It was a terrific blow to have him walk out on her and marry Harriet Metz at the peak of their romance, when she herself expected to be the third Mrs. Livermore, she said. But with a nonchalance that was refreshing and grand, Lucille lifted her eyebrows, took a long drag of her cigarette, and announced:

"That's life, I guess."

"There's nothing in the world I wouldn't do for J. L.," she said, taking things easy in her suite at the Hotel Touraine.

On Thursday Miss Ballantine and her partner Paul Pierce, now appearing in "As Thousands Cheer" will dance together at one of the

New York Adopts Relief Lottery

New York, Sept. 18 (AP)—The board of aldermen, by a vote of 60 to 1, today adopted the city lottery plan as a means of raising relief revenues. By a vote, also of 60 to 1, the board passed a bill taxing gross incomes of business concerns at the rate of 1-10 of 1 per cent. An income tax of 15 per cent of all federal taxes paid in 1934 was approved unanimously.

JONES RESIGNS AS PHONE HEAD

Matt B. Jones, 63, for 15 years president of the New England Telephone Company, today tendered his resignation, effective September 30.

His resignation anticipated by a short time the normal termination of his services under the established retirement plan of the company. He will serve as a member of the board of directors until he is 64.

He will be succeeded by John J. Robinson, vice-president of the New York Telephone Company, who started his career in the bottom of manholes splicing underground cables.

Robinson, who is 55, entered the service of the telephone company in 1899. Graduating from high school in Brooklyn, N. Y., he became a cable splicer's helper and later a cable splicer.

Leaving the New York telephone company he went to Michigan and St. Louis, Mo., working his way up to the position of plant superintendent.

Returning East in 1924 as plant superintendent he later became vice-president of the New York company. He is married and has five children.

$131,000 LOAN IS BARED IN MULLONEY TRIAL

The United States Government charged today that a niece and former secretary of imprisoned banker John A. Deery was the "woman of straw" in a $131,000 promissory note transaction resulting in the indictment of Deery and Banker Daniel C. Mulloney.

Special Assistant United States Attorney General Irving G. McCann made the charge—naming Helen L. Ganley—in federal court today at opening of trial of Deery and Mulloney, former head of the Federal National Bank.

NAMED FIRST TIME

Mulloney and Deery, who was head of the Salem Trust Co., an affiliate of the collapsed Federal National, are charged in a joint indictment with making a straw loan to Miss Ganley—named by McCann for the first time as a relative of Deery.

Mulloney alone is charged with misapplication of the Federal National funds in connection with the loan.

Trial began before Judge James M. Morton, Jr., with jury waived.

CITES TWO LOANS

McCann dramatically exclaimed in his opening statement of what the government proposes to prove that the $131,000 promissory note was deposited in the federal bank by one Helen L. Ganley.

Then he declared that she is a niece and former secretary of Deery. He pictured her a "straw woman."

Hat on Cane in Sand Reveals Sea Suicide

Atop the cane was a man's felt hat.

Inside the hat was a slip of paper on which was written: "Alfred G. Clarke, Wendell avenue, Brockton."

And off-shore, in the tide rip at the mouth of Pet River, was the body of Alfred G. Clarke.

Clarke was 74 years old.

He is believed to have waded into the ocean in a spell of despondency induced by his own ill health and the death, last June, of his daughter, Mrs. May Clarke Hopgood.

Charles Peterson, lobster fisherman, found the body, and Brant Rock coast guards recovered it. An autopsy will be performed.

Clarke left his Brockton home yesterday morning and was reported missing to Brockton police last night. It is not known how he went to Marshfield.

He was a retired shoe manufacturer and with his aged wife made his home with his son-in-law, William Hopgood. A grandchild also survives.

Farmer's Body Found

Williamstown, Vt., Sept. 18 (AP)—The body of Allen McKenzie, a farmer, was found outside his home here today. Authorities began an investigation to determine whether he had been murdered.

100 BOYS HUNT KILLER'S GUN; POLICE WAIT CONFESSION

SLAYER EXPECTED TO SAVE INNOCENT SUSPECTS

By JOHN H. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Northfield, Sept. 18 — Hopeful that they may be the means of bringing their principal's killer to justice, 100 boys of Mt. Hermon School began a fine-tooth comb search of the campus and surrounding territory today for the shotgun with which the Rev. Elliott Speer was murdered.

The students were divided into groups of 10, each group was placed in charge of a state trooper and allotted specific territory to search.

Much of the hunting was through wooded tracts on and outside the 1000-acre campus.

PHONE CALL TRACED

Each group was asked particularly to watch for a shotgun or a shotgun shell, but the boys were also instructed to be on the lookout for anything that might be a clue to the direction in which the slayer fled.

Meanwhile, detectives were hopeful today that a confession of the murder might come. Their hopes are based on a wealth of experience with murderers of the fanatic type, and it was a slayer in this classification, they believe, who shot Dr. Speer to death in his study.

The declared "mysterious telephone call" received at the Speer home less than an hour after Dr. Speer had been fatally shot was explained today by M. David Birdsall, school purchasing agent, who said that he took the call and that it was from the school dean, Dr. Thomas E. Elder, who had not been notified of the slaying.

STILL BLAME FANATIC

Dean Elder called the Speer home on a routine school matter, Birdsall asserted, and was told that Dr. Speer had been killed by an unidentified assassin. According to Birdsall, there was no mysterious telephone call.

While the dozen or so "clues" unearthed thus far in the case have been proved carefully, they are on the point of being discarded, with police clinging to their original theory that violent disagreement with the liberal views of Dr. Speer animated his killer.

It was along this line that the weight of the investigation again centered today. A smoke-screen covered much of the activity of investigators but it was further revealed that the interrogation of every one who might have come into the "fanatic" group was being continued.

As well, quizzing of all who might shed light on such a person was continued. By no means, state detectives declared, was suspicion directed at all who are questioned, but the interrogation is done with the idea of gradually breaking down the person suspected.

MYSTERY AUTO SOUGHT

A good deal of attention is paid to the story told by Daniel Bodley, school laundryman, and by Mr. and Mrs. William Dierig. Dierig is school carpenter.

This group told police of having been talking together about 150 yards from the Speer home the night of the slaying and of seeing a speeding automobile shortly after they heard a shotgun discharged.

Within three minutes of the explosion, a Franklin automobile of an old type came down the road from the direction of the Speer house, passed them at a rate of speed that they characterized as "dangerous" for such a narrow road, then passed into the main highway of Route 10.

It was revealed by officials who have talked with Mrs. Charlotte Speer, widow of the murdered headmaster, that she had never been told of any enemies by her husband, no could she think of any.

Nevertheless, investigation disclosed, in a drawer in a table on Dr. Speer's study, within two feet of the spot on which he was shot, a fully loaded revolver reposed.

Their studies of the case have showed that the doctor was reticent in matters of unpleasant nature, police said. Therefore they feel that what troubles he might have had he would not have told his wife.

They are frankly puzzled in the matter of the revolver. During the time Dr. Speer spent in his Canadian camp—a matter of three weeks—he had with him neither gun nor rod for game or fish and it was learned that he refused an invitation to join a national society here because he was of pacifistic nature and opposed to use of firearms.

Under the double row of ancient elms, in white colonial houses along the main street, and in the rural side lanes leading off to right and left, there live more persons of deep religious convictions than in any other community of the same size.

The Puritan group—Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Methodists, Quakers, Lutherans and Baptists, are among the most virtuous and most orderly in the world.

The shock of this brutal murder has shaken the community. The murderer is still at large, and the thought that haunts the community is the one that some member of their group may have lost his mental balance and taken upon himself to avenge some fancied irreverence on the part of the newer element in the town and schools.

FEARS RELIGIOUS FANATIC

Confirmation of the police theory that there may be a confession within a short time came from Mrs. William R. Moody, whose late husband was head of the Northfield school for more than 30 years. He was succeeded by Dr. Speer six years ago.

Mrs. Moody, basing her reasoning on long experience in dealing with "borderline" cases of delinquency, declared that the possibility of murder from religious mania could not be ignored.

Then she stated, if such were the motive, the murderer would confess within a week, probably within four days.

This is the fourth day since Dr. Speer was shot down.

Mrs. Moody, the most dramatic figure in the surroundings of this strange crime, sits alone in her home here. The home was presented to her by two women admirers many years ago. One of her daughters, Mrs. Constance Chase, is her only companion.

Somewhat deaf and practically blind, more than 60 years of age, the mother of seven children, Mrs. Moody has been an influence on thousands of lives and is looked on today as the mother confessor to persons in all parts of the country and from many foreign lands.

The two families have visited back and forth during the summer and Dr. Speer has shown marked courtesies to the Moody family during the past few months.

State Plays Its Aces in Grim Game to Trap Her Father's Killer

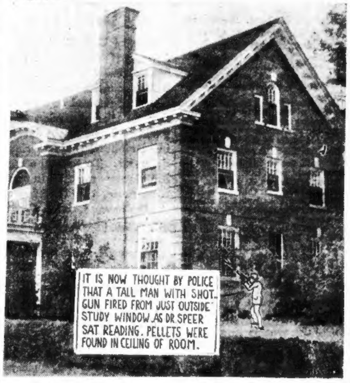
CAPTAIN JAMES MAHONEY

DIST. ATTY. JOSEPH BARTLET DETECTIVE SILAS SMITH GENERAL NEEDHAM

Ace detectives of the state police department under guidance of Brigadier-General Daniel Needham, Commissioner of Public Safety and Captain James Mahoney of the State police are plotting the search for the killer of Dr. Elliott Speer, master of Mount Hermon Preparatory School. With General Needham and Captain Mahoney are District Attorney Bartlett and Detective Silas Smith. It was Dean Thomas Elder who made the phone call to the Speer home soon after the killing, it was explained today. (Pictures by Boston Evening Amrican Staff Photographer.)



IT IS NOW THOUGHT BY POLICE THAT A TALL MAN WITH SHOT-GUN FIRED FROM JUST OUTSIDE STUDY WINDOW AS DR SPEER SAT READING. PELLETS WERE FOUND IN CEILING OF ROOM.

The Speer home on the campus of Mount Herman Academy, Northfield, Mass. Indications are now that the shots were not fired from tree, but by a tall man, standing on the ground, just outside the study window. This police believe is a more reasonable thought than any other advanced.

Bandit Gets $40 at Gas Station

Brandishing a gun, a holdup man took between $30 and $40 from James Jellison, attendant in a gasoline station at Mystic avenue and Fellsway East, Somerville. POSSES SEEK LOST BABY road, her mother, Mrs. Rose Marshall, was borne up by recollection of the happy fate of Bobby Conner, the two-year-old Hartsdale, N. Y., child who wandered into the woods earlier in the year, and was found alive after a search of several days.

Last night's storm, however, was more severe than any during the interval of Bobby's disappearance.

A woodland area about three miles square was covered during last night's search. It was believed that Nancy, able only to toddle, could not have gone farther than that.

HOPE STILL LIVES

When no clue was found, the theory that someone may have stolen the child, or accidentally killed it with an automobile, was advanced.

Troopers impressed upon the searchers, however, that Bobby Conner was found in woods near his home which had been searched on several occasions.

Nancy was last seen yesterday about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. She had been playing outside in the drizzle of rain, and had stayed fairly close to the house all afternoon. There is not much traffic in the vicinity of her home.

Mrs. Marshall began a search for her shortly after 4 o'clock, Nancy's supper hour.

She continued this search with the aid of neighbors until about 10:30, when it was decided to notify the police.

TROOPERS JOIN SEARCH

Sergeant Frank W. Pierce of the state police barracks at Hope Valley quickly mobilized a searching party. The search widened with fears as the storm increased. A dozen troopers arrived from the Hope Valley barracks. Fathers and mothers in the district left their homes, with searchlights and lanterns, and joined in the hunt.

Nancy is the youngest of four children. Two of them played with her at the edge of the woods yesterday, but had no idea, they said, what had happened to her.

The missing child's father, John Marshall, has been away from home for three weeks.

Services Tonight Usher In Jewish Yom Kippur

Services tonight in Jewish synagogues throughout Greater Boston mark the eve of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, holiest of all holy days in the Hebrew calendar.

Yom Kippur is last of the Ten Penitential Days, which began a week ago Sunday night with Rosh Hashona, the Jewish New Year.

Tonight's services are featured by the singing of the age-old chant, Kol Nidre, literally signifying the cancelling of all rash vows.

Tomorrow, Yom Kippur is strictest off all Hebrew fast days. Jews everywhere, according to tradition, must abstain from food, drink, toil and pleasure.

The sacred day will end with solemn invocation of God's name and the blowing of the Shofar, the ram's horn trumpet.

At Kehillath Israel Synagogue, Brookline, Rabbi Louis M. Epstein will speak tonight on a "Program of Life," citing the confession of David as emphasizing the value of the three virtues, humility, contentment and simplicity. Tomorrow all-day services will be conducted by Rabbi Epstein and Cantor Sol Fuchs.

Rabbi Isaac Hochman of Congregation Shomrei Linath Hazedek and Congregation Shearith Israel, both of Chelsea, will conduct tonight's and tomorrow's services at those synagogues. His topic tonight will be "The Glory of Repentance"; tomorrow, "What Is Man?"

Brockton Police Sleuth Suicide

Brockton, Sept. 18—Inspector George E. Linnehan, of the Brockton police department, committed suicide today, according to the medical examiner, in the bathroom of his home on Baxendale avenue, by shooting himself through the head with his service revolver.

The reason was a mystery to his wife and his associates in the police department.

He ended his life less than an hour before he was to have reported for duty at police headquarters and while his wife was preparing his breakfast.

Inspector Linnehan one time arrested four armed burglars single-handed and marched them at gun point more than a mile to the police station.

Montreal, Sept. 18 (INS)—Death today claimed Rodrigue Villeneuve, Montreal shoemaker and father of Cardinal J. R. M. Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec.

Ruske Given Life for Girl's Murder

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP)—Albert Ruske, 27, mechanic, was under a life sentence today after he had pleaded guilty to the slaying of eight-year-old Elaine Watson. Ruske, who previously had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, admitted killing the girl because he feared she would discover he had slaughtered one of her rabbits.

The fact that four psychiatrists reported Ruske was "definitely abnormal" although "legally sane," saved him from death.

CCC Youth Gets College Award

Washington, Sept. 18 (AP)—emergency conservation work, announced today that Clinton E. Davenport, a civilian conservation corps worker enrolled from New Britain, Conn., had been awarded a scholarship to Wesleyan University. Davenport was selected from 14 contestants, one from each of the 14 CCC camps in Connecticut, as the enrollee most worthy of going to college.

STRIKES LINKED IN PROBE OF MUNITIONS

Washington, Sept. 18—Failure of an airplane to deliver tear gas to Rhode Island caused "two or three' men to be killed in textile strike riots, the senate munitions committee was told today.

An airplane carrying 400 pounds of tear gas from the plant of the Federal Laboratories Co. to the Rhode Island National Guard crashed in the Allegheny Mountains, near Bedford, Pa., John Y. Young, president testified. He said:

"I am sorry the plane did not get through. The troops had to use fire arms and killed two or three people."

The company's sales during the textile strike have risen from five to ten per cent, Young testified. He explained considerable had been sold in Cuba.

Chairman Nye of the committee stated today he had been informed American firms were shipping 100 airplane motors a month to Germany and that Hitler would soon have an aerial navy of 200 ships.

USES IMPOUNDED FUNDS

A report that Germany was using impounded foreign funds to subsidize German aircraft manufacturers was read to the committee.

A letter written December 4, 1933, by the International Engineering Company, Inc., to the United Aircraft Exports, Inc., was put into the record. It said the German government was subsidizing German manufacturers to the extent of 20 per cent against non-German competition in all lines. The letter said:

"This fact should be known to American firms as we have recently noted that the foreign funds impounded in Germany are now used in financing such subsidies."

WARNED BY UNITED STATES

Other evidence was presented to show that the State Department, on August 5, 1933, took cognizance of sales of airplanes by American manufacturers to the German government and took steps to warn exporers that the American government was opposed to such exports.

Brigadier-General William E. Mitchell, former chief of the army air corps, conferred with members of the Senate committee today in a closed session before it reopened its hearings.

Chairman Nye said Mitchell had served the committee in an advisory capacity during its study of aircraft matters.

FAMINE THREATENS NOME AFTER FLAMES SWEEP CITY

FOOD SUPPLIES DESTROYED IN FIRE

By RUSSEL MAYNARD
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 18—The grim threat of famine hung over the 1500 residents of this once famous mining city of the far North, today, following a disastrous fire which destroyed virtually every building and dwelling place of consequence and caused property damage estimated at upwards of $2,000,000.

With the severe Arctic winter of eight months duration rapidly approaching, and most of the food supply destroyed in the fire, residents frantically sought the aid of the federal government.

FAMINE THREATENS

It was plainly evident that unless a plentiful supply of food is rushed here immediately and some form of shelter provided for those made homeless in the fire before the winter could descends upon the city a heavy loss of life would result.

The temperature is near the freezing point.

Relief kitchens fed the city temporarily. City officials began a survey to determine how long the food would last.

The federal government, Red Cross and American companies promptly promised to rush aid.

Already new food supplies are on the way aboard the liner Victoria due in Nome a week hence. She left Seattle last Saturday.

U. S. RUSHES AID

The Coast Guard Cutter Northland was ordered to put out from Dutch Harbor—nearest Alaska city by water—and speed from the Aleutian Islands to give what aid it could.

Coast Guard headquarters at Washington sent the following radio to the commander of the Bering Sea patrol force:

"Proceed to Nome with cutters Chelan, Shoshone and Northland to render whatever assistance necessary to destitute and homeless."

At least two persons, both Eskimos, are known to have been burned to death and innumerable others injured in the fire, which broke out late yesterday and which was still raging at an early hour today.

The injured are being cared for in an emergency hospital hurriedly set up just beyond the reach of the flames, while relief kitchens and shelters for the homeless have been established in warehouses on the outskirts of the city.

The fire started from a spark on the roof of the Golden Gate Hotel, and after spreading rapidly through the rooms of the hotel communicated itself to adjacent buildings.

In a short time all of the government buildings, including the post office, the court house, the jail, and road commission headquarters were ablaze.

BLAZE SPREAD RAPIDLY

Within an hour the blaze had spread to Front street, where almost all of the business buildings were located. They were quickly demolished. No restaurants were left standing.

Airplane ticket offices and hangars, saloons, pool rooms, garages, jewelry stores, drug stores, a municipal steam heating plant and huge quantities of fuel oil all were destroyed.

Grocery stores were among the first to go up in the flames and very little food was saved.

DYNAMITE BUILDINGS

The firemen then began dynamiting buildings in a futile effort to halt the flames. Block after block of business houses and dwelling places were blown up by the fire-fighters and most of the available dynamite in the section was used up.

The only buildings left undamaged today were the United States radio station, the Lomen Commercial Hotel and a few homes in the northern section of the town.

Hunter Mistakes Socks for Game

Uhrichsville, O., Sept. 18—U. S. Bair, 40, of Massillon, hung his flaming red socks on a fence while he removed briars and sand from his shoes during a hunting trip.

A companion, Ed Mitchell, saw the socks and thought they represented a squirrel's tail. The resultant shotgun blast filled Briar's leg and arm with 70 pieces of shot. Physicians said he will recover. reached one of the highest salaries in Hollywood, something she never dreamed about when she was a clerk in the Swedish capital.

Yesterday was the 29th birthday of Dolores Costello, which she celebrated quietly here, her husband, John Barrymore, 52, being in New York on business. Esther Ralston reached 32 yesterday and Winnie Lightner 33 on the same day.

Boy Penman Loses Finger

Shortly after he returned home from school with a mark of 100 in penmanship, George Driscoll, had the middle finger of his right hand severed with an axe while building a house with a playmate in a cellar on Williams avenue, Hyde Park. Police said the Driscoll boy who lives on Floral place, Hyde Park, was playing in the cellar of the home of Edgar Hall, 10, when the accident occurred.

ASTOR, BRIDE MAY MAKE UP AT WEDDING

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 18—It looks as though the present highly irritable John Jacob Astor, III, and his bride of three months, the former Ellen Tuck French, may emerge from that row of theirs with that look in their eyes again. That is, it looks that way.

Exhibiting anything but a mild mood, and flanked by a platoon of railroad police, the young scion swept into town last night, following his bride by only a day. He came for the express purpose, apparently, of attending the wedding tomorrow of Miss Joan Blake and Henry Harjes, at which Mrs. John, III, is to be a bridesmaid.

And thereby hangs the tale, for in society circles here it is expected that witnessing of the tableau of young love which they themselves enacted three months ago may serve to bring another guest to the Blake-Harjes ceremony—the dove of peace.

Astor had one word for all questions concerning the couple's reported quarrel in Providence the other night. Adding a half yard to the length of each step as he traversed Grand Central terminal, he delivered it unmistakably:

"Nuts!"

The "nuts" was provoked by an attempt to verify reports that the argument had something to do with John Jacob's former fiancee, Miss Eileen Gillespie, an expected guest at the wedding to be attended by the Astors tomorrow.

Asked whether or not he intended to see his wife while in New York, the striding scion said:

"That is none of your damned business!"

Meanwhile, "Tucky" is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Burrill, her grandparents, and has made it definitely known she has no intention of issuing any statements.

Fire Scare in Lynn City Hall

Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn and 300 City Hall employes took part in an unscheduled demonstration of the speed of the Lynn fire department today, when a false fire alarm sounded in the building.

The mayor had barely arrived at the office when the alarm sounded and the workers in the building fled. There was no fire, however, a short circuit in the system causing the alarm.

Mussolini Orders Boys of 8 "Conscripted" for Army

By Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 18—Compulsory military service for Italians, beginning at the age of eight and continuing to the age of 33, was decreed today by the council of ministers in probably the most sweeping military law ever passed in history.

Declaring "the functions of a citizen and of a soldier are not dividable in the Fascist state," the council created the three following categories of compulsory military training:

1—Preliminary — Beginning at the age of 8 years.

2—Military—Beginning at the age of 21 years for two years.

3—Post-Military — Continuing for 10 years after the military phase is concluded.

The council declared that by this decree, boys from eight years of age until called to arms at 21 will be prepared spiritually, physically and militarily by the civil organiaztion of the Fascist Balilla and the Fascist Youths of Combat.

Thus, when they enter the armed forces, they can dedicate themselves exclusively to warlike professional and specialized training in arms.

The council instituted a liaison body between the armed forces and all organizations which will cooperate in "the formation of an armed nation" and will place an army corps general at the body's head.

"The purpose of the first stage of compulsory pre-military training is to give boys a passion for military life through frequent contacts with the armed forces whose warlike glories and traditions will be re-evoked."

In addition, the council decided to institute courses in military culture in all high schools and colleges, saying:

"The general culture of students destined in future to constitute the middle and ruling classes of the country will thus be opportunely completed by adequate military cultural preparation which will permit the best utilization of each one in the officers' rank of the state-armed forces.

"The military notion with which each young man will be furnished by the time he begins his military service will permit him to devote the little time available to the exclusively practical part of his training."

Show Goes On as Baby Arrives

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 18—The show must go one—even if it's in radio.

The arrival of a baby Sunday—her only day of inactivity in a Columbia Broadcasting System dramatic sketch in which she plays "Sally"—didn't keep Maxine Garner (Mrs. L. M. Nelson, Jr.) off the air.

A microphone was set up in her hospital room, and the series continued as scheduled.

The sketch is on the air every day except Sunday. Mrs. Nelson appeared in it Saturday afternoon. Sunday morning her child was born. She didn't miss a day's work.

NEWTON POLICE ESCAPE INJURY AS AUTO TIPS

Tire guards, used on the Newton police armored cars to protect the front wheels from bullets, prevented serious injuries to Patrolmen Edward J. Foley and Henry McDonough when their car was in collision with another at Lewis Terrace and Washington street, Newton.

The tire guards on the armored car dug into the ground at the time of the collision stopping the police car on the edge of a 20-foot drop to the railroad tracks. Both officers escaped with cuts.

William Scheren, of Crafts street, Newtonville, driver of the other car, with his wife, were uninjured. The armored car was badly damaged and a fence of iron pipe broken.

POLICE ACCUSE BIG HOTEL IN RUM QUIZ

Drunken men staggered around a hotel lounge and bar and talked with unescorted girls, it was testified before the Boston licensing board today, when a hearing was given on a police complaint against the hotel.

The managing director of the hotel appeared before the board to answer the complaint, made by Sergeant Manuel Suzan of Back Bay station.

The manager told the licensing board he knew nothing about the incident except through a report by a uniformed attendant in the lounge.

A new rule is in force at the hotel, he said, barring women without escorts after 5 p. m. from the lounge and bar.

In addition he has employed a night manager whose duty is to watch the lounge bar and enforce the regulations.

SAW TWO TIPSY MEN

The police sergeant declared that in a checkup of hotels and bars he visited the hotel lounge and bar on August 18 and saw a man "staggering around with a drink in his hand." This man went over and talked with another man, also drunk, according to Suzan, and then the two crossed the lounge and talked with two unescorted girls.

The licensing board took the police complaint under advisement.

Another police complaint, which was also taken under advisement, was against the Cottage Garden in Dudley street, Roxbury, with Peter Lazzara, the proprietor, called before the board on the initiative of Captain Thomas Kavanaugh and Sergeant John Crossen of Dudley street station.

Captain Kavanaugh said he found employed there a cook who had been fined $50 for selling "nigger pool" numbers and found that a bartender employed was an alien.

The proprietor, in defense of the spot, said he had discharged the cook upon being informed of the "nigger pool" conviction. Lazzara charged that jealous neighbors were responsible for calling police to his cafe unnecessarily.

The name of Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, noted writer and worker for women's rights, was brought into the hearing on neighbor's complaints against the Radcliffe Cafe, also in Dudley street, owned by Giovanni Frisone, a pre-repeal barber.

CALLED POLICE IN VAIN

Israel Nesson of 1742 Beacon street, Brookline, owner of two apartment blocks housing 48 tenants, told the licensing board Miss Blackwell has been one of the tenants for 25 years, but that others have moved out because of noise and disorder in the cafe. His property, he said, is depreciating in value as a result.

One of the tenants, Mrs. C. R. Smith, declared to the board that "since this place has had a license, I don't believe I've had more than a dozen nights of undisturbed sleep."

She has called police on several occasions, she said, "but I must say that I haven't got much co-operation."

Frequently she has seen young girls leave the cafe under the influence of liquor, Mrs. Smith asserted.

Miss Mary Higgins said her windows face on the alley. Today at 1 a. m., she declared, she ordered a noisy group out of the alley. She exclaimed:

Representative Anthony A. McNulty appeared for Frisone.

Ruth Chatterton Calls Brent Sulky

Los Angeles, Sept. 18 (AP)—George Brent was described as "sulky, unreasonable and domineering" in a complaint which brought his two-year-old marriage to Ruth Chatterton, actress, into the divorce courts today. The suit, filed by attorneys for the 40-year-old actress, marked a climax to their separation last March. Brent said then he thought it best they live apart if each were to follow a film career.

Police Here Check Boy Dead on Train

Boston police today received a request to attempt to identify the body of an 18-year-old boy who was found dead in an empty freight car in Euclid, Ohio, a week ago.

State police in Ohio believe the youth was from Boston because the car was in this city two weeks ago.

The boy is described as 5 feet, 10 inches tall, weighing 135 pounds and dressed in a blue coat and blue overalls.

Pastor Puts Ban on Roosevelt

By Associated Press

New Castle, Pa., Sept. 18—The pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Clymer, N. Y., says President Roosevelt would not be allowed in the pulpit of the church.

In a statement before delegates to the annual meeting of the Erie conference, Rev. L. R. Phipps, pastor of the Clymer church, said:

"I am tired of hearing Roosevelt described as the most religious president we have ever had. Since he has been president, he has attended church but three times. If ever he comes to my town, he can't get into the pulpit of my church."

stellar attractions of the opening of the Club Touraine.

But today as she talked with the reporter, she wasn't thinking of cartwheels and dance steps. She was back in the days when she and J. L. munched on cold-meat sandwiches in the plunger's Wall Street office, as with huddled heads they watched the ticking of the tape.

Those were the days—only two years ago—when she loved Livermore and for his requited affections sacrificed her stage career and future. When she forfeited rest and sleep to be up at the crack of dawn, as he desired, to rush from her hotel to his and have breakfast with him.

When she was the sweetheart—engaged fiancee, she maintains—not of the millionaire Livermore, but of the Wall Street plunger, plunging a futile return to the powerful position he once enjoyed.

"J. L. never showered me with jewels or other costly things," she said sadly. "I wasn't smart, you say? But I loved him. I loved that man with all the devotion and beauty in the world. Yes, I guess it was a mean trick his walking out on me.

"I was mad about that man. He was wonderful and so sweet. I guess I still am mad about him now. And of course I wouldn't do anything to harm him. He has enough troubles now without me adding any more to them.

LISTED AS CREDITOR

"I never would have gone into court for his bankruptcy proceedings a few months ago if he hadn't listed me as one of the creditors. That was sort of a mean thing to do.

"If he called me on the phone and said: 'Lucille, I have been forced to the wall. I'll pay you the money I owe you when I have it,' I would have told him it was all right and lt it go at that. But to have included me so coldly with all the other creditors—that was mean and quite a bitter pill to swallow, I tell you."

Lucille said she danced just as happily after breakfast as before on the March day more than a year ago when, through the "cattiness of a girl who lived at the same hotel" she learned that her fiancee had just married a Chicago woman because "it was his happiness at stake, and after all, there's not much happiness in the world."

"And so," she continued to explain, "I sent him a wire wishing him all the happiness in the world, and signed mother's and my name to it."

And from that time to this—barring the few moments she glimpsed of him in the bankruptcy courtroom last March—the dancer hasn't laid eyes on her former sweetheart.

EXPLAINS CONTRACT

The dancer today cleared up all the mystery surrounding the $150 a month until June 1, 1938, contract she had with the plunger and which her attorney had previously described as "a social and business relationship."

It represents, the dancer says, about $10,000 which Livermore owes her resulting from the trading he did for her.

"He bought and sold a great deal of stock for me and the amount due me ran up to about $10,000," she explained. "When he listed me as a creditor there was nothing else for me to do but to try and collect it. The contract was drawn up in July, 1933.

"But I haven't received the $150 since last December, and I guess there is slim hope that I will ever get any more money. But I am not worried. I wouldn't sue him. I might just as well be a good sport.

REFUSED TO SUE HIM

"And certainly I never had any intentions then or now of suing him for breach of promise. We had a beautiful romance while it lasted—a beautiful one. We loved each other. I've got the past to remember and it was worth it.

"I went with him for about two years. We met at a dinner party. By the way, I" have an anniversary of our meeting the twenty-first day of this month—kind of a funny memory. Our meeting took place a few months after he and his second wife had legally separated. At the time he was upset about the children. Maybe I was sympathetic. Whatever it was, our friendship developed into a romance. It was such a lovely one and he was such a wonderful man.

"I used to go to his office and watch the tape with him.

24 TO GRADUATE ON NANTUCKET

With the nautical schoolship Nantucket back home after her 20th annual foreign cruise, preparations were being made today for the fall graduation exercises, to be held aboard ship a week from today.

Twenty-four of the future merchant marine officers who have completed courses in seamanship and navigation or marine and electrical engineering, will be presented diplomas.

The Nantucket tied up at the Navy Yard after allowing a number of her cadets shore leave at Fall River and Cataumet where the ship has been for the past week.

During this years' cruise, 9740 miles were covered including visits to Horta in the Azores, Dublin, Liverpool, and Gibraltar. After the graduation, the ship will go into winter quarters.

Eddy's Grave at Side of Parents

Bridgeport, Ct., Sept. 18 (AP)—The wish of Edward Gargiulo, who became well known as Wesley Eddy in theatrical circles, to be buried beside his parents is to be granted, his brother, Joseph, said here today.

The actor, who had grieved unceasingly during the last several years over the deaths of his father and mother, shot himself while standing over their graves Sunday.

B. U. ADDS FOUR NEW COURSES

Boston University graduate school will add four new courses to its 41-course curriculum, it was announced today. The four subjects are: Evolution of American Economic Life; Marketing of Manufactured Goods; Business Statistics; and Seminar in Commercial Education.

Courses in the graduate business college cover the fields of accounting, advertising, management, marketing, economics, commercial education, English, finance, law, psychology, and foreign languages.

Andrew W. Peterson, a member of the Babson statistical organization of Wellesley, has been added as instructor in accounting. He was formerly head of the accounting department at the University of Porto Rico.

4 Women Rescued on Burning Roof

Middleton, R. I., Sept. 18—Four persons were rescued from the roof of the front porch of their home on Aquidneck avenue, during a fire, said to be of incendiary origin.

Mrs. Marion Pinto and her daughter, Betty, and Mrs. Francis Christie and her daughter, Dorothy, were helped to the street by passing motorists after they were forced to flee to the roof when trapped in the house by flames.

CURLEY SEES MAJORITY IN EVERY COUNTY

By FRANK REILLY

"I will carry Boston by a vote of 10 to 1, and I will be given a majority of the votes cast in every Massachusetts county on Thursday."

With this declaration, former Mayor James M. Curley, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, today launched a drive which is expected to carry him before more than 70,000 voters in the next 36 hours.

In a tour of Greater Boston, during which he made 15 speeches, Curley last night addressed gatherings having an estimated total attendance of 25,000 persons. He declared:

"This fight is over. The Cole-Ely forces are on the run.

"A landslide to my candidacy, which began last Sunday, has now assumed such proportions as to amaze even those of my friends who long ago were convinced I would be victorious."

The former mayor stated that having satisfied himself that he will be victorious on Thursday, he today made arrangements for immediate organization of committees of independent and Republican voters of every community in the state to support him in the November election. He said:

"Unbiased political observers state that the vote cast for me on Thursday will make history in this Commonwealth."

City Councillor Joseph McGrath of Dorchester, chairman of the committee designated by the ex-mayor to receive pledges of support from persons who until now have taken no part in the Curley campaign, announced today that during the past 24 hours over 3000 citizens have communicated with his group. He declared:

MANY PLEDGE AID

"More than 400 telegrams were received from voters of cities and towns who were unable to come to Boston and pledge their support in person. Nearly 50 per cent of the messages were from persons who had been friendly to the candidacy of General Cole, but who now realize that his fight is a hopeless one."

State Senator Joseph A. Langone, of North End, declared today that Curley will receive 95 per cent of the vote cast by Italian-Americans of the state. He said:

"Curley has always been a friend of the immigrant and the poor. The bread that he cast upon the waters during many years will come back to him a hundred fold on Thursday."

Friends of Mayor Mansfield were among those who yesterday pledged their support to Curley. William Arthur Reilly, former chairman of the Boston school committee stated:

"The opposition of Mr. Mansfield to Mr. Curley, although cleverly disguised as a discussion of the tax rate, has met with the disapproval of even his friends."

John M. Kelly, chairman of the committee campaigning in behalf of the former mayor in the Mission Hill section of Roxbury, today took sharp issue with supporters of General Cole, who have contended that their man has served President Roosevelt as faithfully as has Mr. Curley. He said:

"James M. Curley has demonstrated his fealty to Roosevelt. If James M. Curley was selected by Roosevelt to tour the nation as his representative, during the campaign of 1932, with instructions to tear down and crush the poisonous Republican propaganda then being circulated, who can deny the supposition that he is today the representative of Roosevelt in this contest?

SEES COLE DEFEAT

"If Curley was then the hand picked orator for Roosevelt he must of necessity now hold that position in Massachusetts. Curley hasn't changed, nor has Roosevelt. Their deep and abiding friendship still exists."

Speaking in his own behalf at a rally in his headquarters today Curley said:

"The people of Massachusetts will vote for what is best for themselves. The Republicans will not think in terms of narrow patrisanshap this year. They will vote for Roosevelt, and for those who support his policies.

"The people cannot vote for the hand picked candidate of Wall Street in November. The people, knowing the weakness of Mr. Cole and having in mind his defeat in 1928 when Massachusetts went Democratic, will not vote for him on Thursday in order that he may be a set-up for Gaspar Griswold Bacon.

"I stood a lone with Roosevelt when every hand was raised against him. I do not stand alone now. The voters of Maine, both Democratic and Republican, have pointed the way for Massachusetts. The victory of the Roosevelt forces in Maine last week will be repeated here on Thursday and again in November when I am elected to the governorship.

TONIGHT'S RALLIES

"I haven't any fear as to the outcome of this campaign. General Cole was defeated before he was nominated.

"It was a trade to put a weak man in nomination so that Bacon could be elected in November. I will defeat Cole in Governor Ely's home town, Westfield. The voters will use their intelligence and support a man who believes in Roosevelt.

"No man has ever had a more bitter or keener enemy than President Roosevelt has in the present Governor of Massachusetts. The voters know that and they will not forget that he stabbed Roosevelt in the back at a time when thousands of needy families were benefitting by the Roosevelt recovery program in Massachusetts."

Former Mayor Curley will speak tonight in the Thorndike School, East Cambridge; Copley Plaza Hotel; Robert G. Shaw School, West Roxbury; Hyde Park Municipal Building; at the Dorchester High School for Girls and the Mather School, that district; John Winthrop School, Roxbury; the Russell School and Flood Square, South Boston; East Boston High School, and the ward room, Bunker Hill street, Charlestown.

Cole Workers Seek to Stem Sweep to Curley

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Forces of General Charles H. Cole, in a state bordering on panic, were today concentrating every effort in a last desperate attempt to stem what has every appearance of being a sweep in Thursday's primary for former Mayor James M. Curley.

From every part of the state, especially in the larger cities, reports indicate that Curleys candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor is gaining by leaps and bounds.

In the reaction seen against the move to "stop Curley", original Roosevelt supporter and foremost advocate of "work and wages" as a substitute for the dole, fears were being expressed today that almost the entire Worcester endorsed state ticket might go down to defeat.

HURLEY VICTORY SURE

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley alone of those seeking statewide endorsement with no opposition, is as good as re-nominated. The popularity of the state treasurer, evidenced in two elections, has increased rather than waned.

With Senator Walsh and Governor Ely as the headliners, the Cole campaign will reach its peak tonight with a big rally in Tremont Temple.

The Curley highmark will be set tomorrow night, eve of primary day, when one of the greatest turnouts in the political history of Boston is expected to battle for entrance to Symphony Hall. Preparations are being made to take care of the big overflow through amplifiers and there is some talk of securing another hall.

Reports that Governor Ely might bolt the Democratic party in the event of the nomination of the ex-mayor are rejected as unthinkable by Curley.

The former mayor declared that there is no occasion to worry on this score, that the governor has been honored by the party to such an extent "that he cannot even consider such an atrocious line of conduct." The former mayor said:

"I do not apprehend that Governor Ely, with the honors and responsibility of his high office, would consider for an instant the line of conduct attributed to him by this report."

COLE DEFENDS RECORD

Former Lieutenant Governor Edward P. Barry, in rallies in Boston, flayed Senator Walsh, whom he is opposing for the nomination of United States senator. He pictured Walsh as the 'most destructive and insidious influence in the Democratic Party in two generations."

Defending his record as trustee of the Boston Elevated, General Cole, at rallies in Dedham, South Boston, Uphams Corner, participated in by Senator Walsh, declared that the charge made by Curley that he was responsible for losses suffered by the El "were too ridiculous to comment upon were it not for the fact that it has been so seriously taken up by the Curley cohorts."

Cole declared that during the five years of his incumbency, the Elevated had a loss of 147 million revenue passenger riders and an actual drop of receipts of 29 million dollars.

NEW SERIES OF BREAKS IS LAID TO KAMINSKI

Alexander Kaminski, convicted killer, who escaped Hapmden County jail in Springfield, was believed today to be doubling back through Massecahusetts in a stolen automobile, as startling charges came that the escape was engineered by a $10,000 "inside" jail-break fund.

Prints of bare feet, found on the floor of a garage in Thompsonville, Ct., from where an automobile was stalen early this morning, led the police to believe the thief was Kaminski. He was barefooted when he fled the jail.

A small green sedan was stolen from the stall of a nine-car garage. The thief had apparently attempted to start two other cars without success, but he took a coat from one.

CARTRIDGES STOLEN

According to Sheriff David J. Manning, keeper of the jail, Kaminski, on a previous escape from the same jail last October, in which he killed a guard, headed south and stole a car in Longmeadow, later taking and abandoning others.

Police considered as another possible lead a break in the railroad station at Hazardville, a village adjoining Thompsonville. Here two dozen .38-calibre pistol cartridges and 53 cents in change were taken and a cap similar to those worn by all prisoners discarded. Kaminski is said not to have worn a cap, however, when he escaped.

DENIES GANG PLOT

From Stafford, Ct., came another promising clue in a house break, where the burglar obtained a blue coat, a gray coat and a pair of light trousers. Gasoline was taken from two trucks at West Stafford and footprints of a barefoot man were found.

This chain of thefts, according to police apparently gave a denial to the report that well-financed gangsters had engineered Kaminski's escape, for if the escape had been arranged by such a gang, Kaminski would have been taken care of and hidden away.

The killer refugee, the officials said, would not still be without shoes and forced to steal clothing for himself.

BREAK "FINANCED"

Kaminski's escape, financed by the $10,000 "inside" fund, according to the charge today, was engineered by a desperate gang of New Haven, Conn., lawbreakers who wanted Kaminski to join the gang and who raised the fund and planned and executed the getaway as Kaminski was awaiting sentence of death.

liar to himself and herself. Two mediums possessed the usual normal personalities, plus "trance personalities." One lady medium had such erratic electric resistances in her skin that the galvanometer could tell nothing about her "excitement."

Perhaps there is more in spiritualism and spirits than wise men in their philosophy have suspected, although conservatives will still insist that even if spirits were wandering about, trying to say "papa is very happy," they could not say it, because force cannot act without matter and spirits with no material vocal chords could not create sound waves for material ears to collect.

Scientists have found what they call the rosetta stone of heredity. That famous stone, as you know, with the same words cut on its surface in various languages, made possible the reading of Egyptian hieroglyphics. The heredity rosetta stone is a giant chromosome, with strings of the queer little genees that control heredity.

The ordinary chromosome is only fifteen one hundred thousandths of an inch long, and you can imagine how small the string of genees would be. The new big chromosomes, making identification of the genees possible, may make heredity simple. Some scientists may examine your baby's big chromosome and tell you what great grandmother's characteristics the baby will have.

Leroy A. Lincoln, vice-president and general counsel of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, reports that Metropolitan policies on "ordinary life policies," not including group insurance, amount to more than ten thousand million dollars, a record for all time. This justified Edison's statement that success is 90 per cent perspiration, 10 per cent inspiration. F. H. Ecker, head of the Metropolitan company, Mr. Lincoln, his chief assistant, and the whole organization are hard workers. Ten billions of insurance means $100 each for almost the total population of the United States.

Rare gold coins sold last Friday at high prices. A $1 gold piece, coined in Georgia in 1860, sold for $70. Some old $10 gold pieces sold from $29.50 to $35 each. Those that sold $10 gold pieces for $35 may live to regret it, for with gold going up and paper dollars going down, a $10 coin, containing almost half an ounce of gold, may be worth much more than $35. The man that got $70 for his $1 gold coin probably made a good bargain, but you can never be sure.

"Bums" Nickel for Tarzan

Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller, seeking passport applications at Los Angeles, found themselves short of cash. Johnny had only a dollar and Lupe, spilling out the contents of her purse, found only 95 cents among the compacts and powder puffs. So she turned to a spectator and demanded: "Gimme, beeg boy." He shelled out the required nickel. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Rheumatism Cited Worse Than Cancer or T. B.

By Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 18—Chronic rheumatism causes more disabilities in Massachusetts and probably all over the north temperate zone than do cancer, tuberculosis and heart disease combined.

So declared Dr. Robert B. Osgood, emeritus professor of orthopedic surgery at Harvard University, in an address today at the tenth clinical congress of the Connecticut State Medical Society meeting at Sterling law buildings at Yale.

Dr. Osgood further said that an optimistic attitude is justified in regard to the control of this disease and the alleviation of suffering by the use of available knowledge.

Dr. Russell L. Cecil, professor of clinical medicine in Cornell University Medical School, agreed with Dr. Osgood on the importance of chronic rheumatism and especially on the necessity of effective early treatment of infectious arthritis.

Chronic arthritis, a medical term for chronic rheumatism, was described by Dr. Cecil as a general process rather than one localized in the joints. There are two forms, one infectious and one associated with old age. He stressed the pressing need in this country for sanatoria to take care of those advanced cases which are difficult to care for in dispensaries. Many of these patients, Dr. Cecil said, would eventually be rehabilitated and restored to active life by prolonged institutional treatments.

REDS ATTACKED BY M'CORMACK

Constitution Day was observed at the Y. D. Post, American Legion, with an attack on Communism by Congressman John W. McCormack and a plea that Communistic activities should be prohibited by federal law.

In his speech, McCormack declared:

"The Communist movement is anti-religious, anti-American, anti-home life and, in fact, it is opposed to those great principles established by the Constitution with which every true American is in accord. Not content with trying to bring about changes within the law through the ballot box, Communism advocates and uses violence and force."

GRETA GARBO BANS PARTY

Brentwood Heights, Cal., Sept. 18—Greta Garbo is 28 years old today, but it's just another day for the Swedish actress who likes to be alone.

There will be no party tonight in the two-story, early California type yellow house on North Carolina avenue, and the big wooden gates will be shut, meaning she's home and probably alone. Her only comment on her birthday was:

"Just a quiet evening at home."

She was born September 18, 1906, at Stockholm, Sweden and christened Greta Gustafson. Coming to America with the name of Garbo, she achieved screen renown

RADIO MOVIES ARE SEEN OVER NEW WAVES

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 18—Engineers of the Radio Corporation of America, who are perfecting a new intercity "facsimile-radio" system of flashing letters and photographs, predicted today that it will completely revolutionize the science of communication.

Micro-waves, tiny impulses measured in inches, are the basis of the new development. These waves are free from static and are not influenced by fading, which the engineers say enables them to operate the facsimile micro-wave system at terrific speeds.

MATTER OF SECONDS

It is expected completed pictures and printed matter will be projected half way across the continent in a fraction of a second over the micro wave. At present, 40 minutes are required to send a picture from Chicago to New York by radio's normal short waves.

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, calls facsimile radio "the gateway to television."

"My faith in the future of radio science is geared to facsimile," he said. "We are sending pictures and printed matter through the air and have found the key to speed the traffic.

"The next step will be to send moving pictures. That is television.

"I am certain that progress will be extremely rapid. We are already building stations for a domestic facsimile service and the oversea channel has already proved its value in flashing news pictures between Europe and America.

"SIMPLE MATTER"

"If we can send 16 pictures a second we have television, and with the new facsimile system that will be a simple matter."

Successful tests over the micro-wave system already have been made between New York and Philadelphia, according to RCA engineers. Eventually it is planned to extend this service to Chicago, Boston, Washington, San Francisco, New Orleans, Detroit, Seattle and Los Angeles.

Farm Milk Price of 7 Cents Asked

While Dr. Einar Jensen, market administrator, prepared to ask the AAA that an increase in the price of milk be granted Greater Boston farmers, expectations were that the farm price of milk will be raised to approximately 7 cents per quart for 3.7 milk sold here as fluid milk.

PRESS BARRED IN PROBE ON DEATH SHIP

Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 18—Mystery shrouded the federal inquiry into the Morro Castle disaster today as officials from the department of commerce shifted their investigation from a New York courtroom to the decks of thewrecked hulk, beached here.

All representatives of the press were barred. Five government officials were allowed by the Ward Line, owner of the ship, to go aboard.

While Dickerson N. Hoover, chairman of the inquiry board, said he had no objection to reporters, F. B. Crocco, a representative of the Ward Line, absolutely forbade it.

1000 SPECTATORS

It was a chilly, dismal day, but more than a thousand spectators lined the boardwalk as the investigators went aboard the ship.

With the board of inquiry was William E. Collins, Shipping Board attorney, serving as counsel for the inquiry, and Capt. William Storey, inspector for the Federal Steamship Inspection Board.

Equipped with hammers and searchlights, the investigators made their way through the hulk in search of clues to substantiate the testimony they have taken.

WALSH QUESTIONS TRIPP

Assistant U. S. Attorney John C. Walsh in New York today questioned 30 members of the Morro Castle crew to determine what importance their testimony might have in the Federal Grand Jury investigation.

William Tripp, a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who was an engineer cadet aboard the Morro Castle, was among those questioned.

Boston Girls Agree Woman's Place in Home

Mussolini Hailed for Ordering Women to Quit Jobs

Buckle down, you married men of Massachusetts. You're nominated and seconded as official—and singlehanded—breadwinners of your respective families.

Premier Mussolini of Italy started it all. He ordered women to get out of industry, throw up their jobs, and hustle home to the cookstove and the kids.

All right, you say, for Italy. But how about America, where the ladies, bless 'em, rule the roost?

Well, that's easily answered. Boston women were frank in admitting how they feel. Sure, they'll work and want to work, until they get a man. Then it's up to him, they say. And more power to Mussolini—and the cookstove and the kids.

Louise Riley of Mattapan, declared:

Louise Riley

"Mussolini and good old fashioned Americans who said it before him, were right. A woman's place is in the home. It's up to the man to be the breadwinner, and if, through general unemployment or through illness he can't assume his natural responsibility, then the family should get state or government assistance. And more men would have work if more women stayed home."

Mary Kelly, of South Boston, said:

Mary Kelly

"Italian women make wonderful mothers. Mussolini is wise in calling home-keeping the most important of all feminine jobs. I think, however, that the doors of outside industry ought not to be barred to young girls or spinsters. They may need paid work to support themselves, but married women should let their husbands be the wage earners. Mussolini does well to insist upon it."

Charles Clough, of South Boston, stated:

Charles Clough

"Mussolini is a wonderful person according to my thought, and whenever a man replace a woman in industry or business he should be given the opportunity. Then and then only will women get their real rights, the rights of security, a home and a husband able to provide for them."

Bernice Smith, of Brighton, declared:

Bernice Smith

"Mussolini may be right about married women staying home. Still, I believe that single girls ought to be given a fair chance to make themselves financially independent. In this modern age, women have found a Valuable place in the business world. It wouldn't be the same without them. When a husband comes into the picture, then the situation is different."

Jack McGuire, of South Boston, said:

Jack McGuire

"In theory, I'm with Mussolini 100 per cent. But, in practice, as economic conditions are now, it seems sometimes necessary for a wife to help a husband out by adding a pay envelope of her own to the family income. Maybe, however, it would work out satisfactorily if all women were barred from industry

Walter Montmeny Dies

Springfield, Sept. 18—Walter R. Montmeny, of Chicopee, production manager of the National Equipment Company, is dead here.

Hyde Park Mothers to Meet Thursday

The first meeting of the Mother's Club, Hyde Park, will be held on Thursday at 2 p. m., in the Congregational church. WRECK DELAYS THOUSANDS

Derailment of two freight cars at Atlantic delayed thousands of commuters inbound from Quincy, Milton and the South Shore today from 15 to 40 minutes when the two north-bound tracks became blocked. Wrecking crews worked from 6:20 to 8:30 before the derailed cars, one a tanker and the other a box car, were placed back on the tracks and shuttled to a siding.

Meanwhile the two south bound tracks were used to handle north bound traffic, but this required re-routing of trains to a cross-over south of the Atlantic station, necessitating a delay that varied at times from 14 to 40 minutes.

Some of the passengers alighted at Atlantic and boarded street cars and taxis to transport them into the city, while others made telephone calls to their places of business to inform employers they would be late.

Telephone Man Saves Train

Norwalk, Ct., Sept. 18—A possible train wreck on the Danbury division of the New Haven railroad was averted by the prompt action of Fred J. Wilson, a telephone repair man.

Wilson, sent to repair some phone trouble at a tire company plant where the torrential downpour of rain had caused a small building to collapse and interfere with the wires, noticed a large section of railroad tracks had been washed away.

Hearing the whistle of the Pittsfield express in the distance, Wilson ran down the tracks and was abel to signal the engineer who quickly brought the train to a stop.

Melrose Borrows at Lowest Rate

The city of Melrose has negotiated a loan for $100,000 in anticipation of taxes, due January 11, 1935, at the lowest rate of interest in its history. The loan was sold to the Merchants' National Bank of Boston at 0.42 per cent discount.

PEEK 'CHECKS' U. S. DEBTORS

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 18—To avoid throwing good money after bad, George N. Peek suggetsed to President Roosevelt today a strict "inventory" of the billions the world owes Americans.

Peek, special foreign trade adviser to the President, also indicated to newspapermen that he may recommend ways to restrict the movement of American capital

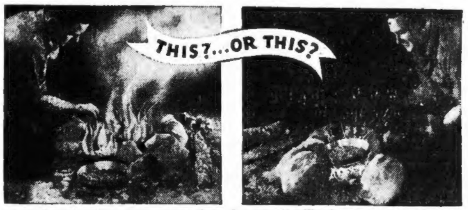
Will you get SOFT AIR combustion with the OIL BURNER you buy?



Ever build a log fire? At first you get leaping flames. Lots of smoke. Wasted heat. That's the opposite of SOFT AIR combustion. Then later the flames quiet down. The smoke thins out. And you have a glowing bed of coals—a friendly, mellow warmth. You get the same brand of heat in SOFT AIR Combustion.

WE SUPPLY THE OIL, TOO!

We don't sell you a Petro-&-Nokol Oil Burner and then forget you. We supply oil, too—in our own trucks from our own oil terminals. This insures your getting just the right grade, and an unfailing supply, of fuel. Moreover, if you desire, we can arrange—without extra cost—to provide "automatic delivery" and keep your tank always filled without any attention on your part.

"IT FLOATS THROUGH THE AIR"

SOFT AIR combustion has one thing in common with the daring young man on the flying trapeze. To burn efficiently, oil must be thoroughly vaporized. Petro-&-Nokol does this vaporizing so completely—breaks up the oil into such tiny particles that they defy gravitation and literally "float through the air."

If some householders could take their chimney's temperature, they'd learn why their fuel bills are so high. SOFT AIR combustion saves you money because it doesn't try to heat anything more than your house.

© 1934 Petroleum Heat & Power Company

IF YOU OWN AN OIL BURNER, don't read this short talk on SOFT AIR combustion. It might make you discontented.

SOFT AIR combustion means that you get one dollar's worth of heat for every dollar spent on fuel oil.

SOFT AIR combustion delivers comfortable heat inside your house—not up the chimney. You don't waste money warming up all outdoors.

SOFT AIR gives a quiet, smooth-burning flame. No need to try to rival the swirling fire of a locomotive's firebox in the cellar of a seven-room house.

SOFT AIR combustion comes only when your oil burner fits your furnace as perfectly as a glove fits a hand. With 3 distinct types—and a complete range of sizes—the Petro-&-Nokol man doesn't have to worry about the right fit.

SOFT AIR is the work of the largest organization in America devoted exclusively to oil heating—the company that founded the domestic oil burner business—the company that never puts out an oil burner model until it has been checked and double-checked a hundred times over.

SOFT AIR is too big to be covered in a few words. Drop in. Or phone. Or send in the coupon. And we'll give you the most interesting oil burner story any home-owner ever listened to.

TIBBETT TAKES TRIPLE ROLES IN RADIO

Operatic star Lawrence Tibbett goes, or comes across the broadcasting board (WBZ) three ways tonight. Hear him between 8:30 and 9 o'clock. First he is to be the featured soloist. Next he is to do a dramatic role. Finally, he figures to be himself. Three-way Tibbett of radioland.

Thus and so opens the new series of forty-five minute Tibbett "mike" shows, due weekly on Tuesday evenings from now on, at the above hour. All of which some leading auto manufacturers have appropriated money to stage. Wilfred Pelletier, conductor of Metropolitan Opera orchestras, will do the musical directing. John B. Kennedy is entered in there also as the ceremony master.

NITWITTY NETWORKER

Some ideas as to the inner workings of a big network studio, especially from a humorous angle, can be counted on when Fred Allen airs his "Town Hall Tonight" turn (WEEI) from 8 until 9 p. m. Sponsors are disclaiming entire responsibility for what Fred may say or do. Meaning all sponsors.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is likewise in the loudspeaker spotlight tonight (WBZ) as of 9:30 p. m. Women as wives of public officials, and women in professional lives themselves are to be discussed by the First Lady.

At the above hour (9:30) and over along the WEEI channel that popular half-hour "Rural Sketch" setting brings a dramatized O. Henry story. It's the whimsical "Ethics of a Pig" piece and stars Arthur Allen and Parker Fenneily, the pair who are rising rapidly in the air acting ranks owing to their realistic country bumpkin characterizations.

SACRED SERVICE

The traditional Kol Nidre Service, as scheduled in every synagogue on earth on the eve of the Day of Atonement, reaches the Yankee Network audience this evening (WAAB) as it originates within Temple Israel walls. Rabbi Harry Levi chooses "A Day of Reckoning" for his sermon text. The plaintive Kol Nidre, a haunting supplication for absolution, is to be sung by an augmented choir and selected soloists.

Bing Crosby and the Boswell Sisters are brought together during the new coast to coast 30 minutes slated to start (WNAC) at 9 o'clock tonight. George Stoll and his orchestra afford the musical background throughout. Hollywood is the scene of vocal action by Bing and the Boswells, at station KHJ. That's where Crosby and the singing sisters began their broadcasting careers.

SCHEDULE SHIFT

Edgar Guest, modern poet of the people and writer for The Boston Evening American, shifts his "Musical Memories" period (WBZ) over to 7:30 p. m. Said new time marks his Fall and Winter wireless work on Tuesday nights henceforth.

When the Chief of the "Secret Agent X-9" club holds forth for his followers this evening (WAAB) on the stroke of 6:30, he brings the "Four Foleys" of Neponset with him. These talented youngsters, Dorothy, Marion, Walter and Donald, are 7, 12, 10 and 15 years old respectively. They return to the "Secret Agent X-9" program written request of countless listeners who heard them some six or eight weeks ago.

Stowaway From Providence Held

DUTCH POLICE BATTLE REDS

By Associated Press

The Hague, Sept. 18—Police dispersed a Communist demonstration after severe fighting today when ten automobile loads of demonstrators tried to upset the royal procession in which Queen Wilhelmina went to the opening of Parliament.

When the Queen spoke from the throne inside the House of Parliament, Communists caused another scene.

Three Communist members of Parliament were ejected from the chamber and arrested.

Contrary to general expectations, the Queen made no reference in her speech to rumors that the betrothal of Princess Juliana was forthcoming.

Roxbury Italians Pick Candidates

Francis E. Kelly, lieutenant governor; Phillip A. Chapman, attorney general; William J. Foley, district attorney; James F. Powers, congressman 12th district; John Patrick Connelly, clerk of supreme judicial court; James J. Mulvey, clerk superior criminal court; Francis A. Campbell, clerk of supreme civil court; Joseph Finnigan, state senator; and Thomas F. Coyne, representative, Ward 13.

The club will hold their fourth annual dance tomorrow night in Otisfield Grande Hall, Roxbury.

Hanging Victim Ruled Suicide

New Bedford, Sept. 18—Associate medical examiner Dr. Charles Shanks, after an autopsy on an unidentified man, pronounced him a suicide by hanging.

The body was found hanging to a tree in the Sol-E-Mar Hospital woods on Sunday, with the hands apparently tied behind the back.

This Ear---That Air---By N. F. T.

This time of year invariably incubates radio discussion (and quotations) regarding privileges for World Series sponsorship. Some figure in the neighborhood of $40,000 per game is about right, and even conservative, so they say. Money does not talk when men mumble into microphones. Moreover, on such basis, a quarter of a million is what it will mean should the big baseball classic stretch out to seven games.

Exclusive rights are to be granted motor car makers of Detroit, the name consisting of four letters, the first is F and the last D—couldn't you guess? Both the NBC and CBS network facilities are to be utilized, as will two sets of "mike" men. Here's hoping a very careful selection of announcers is likewise made, along with the other extensive arrangements.

"N. F. T."

Two young ladies of Boston are lately considered worthy rivals of Fray and Braggiotti, for two piano technique. They are the Jaysnoff Sisters, June and Iris, of Brookline, heard regularly through WBZ-WBZA waves. Just returned from concert work in Maine, the girls tell of playing at an exclusive recital recently held in Harrison. After rendering two or three famous classic selections, requested by the ultra-ultra patrons, a kindly, cultured and elderly lady asked if they knew "The St. Louis Blues" without their music. They promptly played the good old syncopated tune in place of Lizt's Concerto—imagine!

Malcolm McCormack, burly WBZ staff spokesman who has very early morning "Musical Clock" duties to perform at that station, is going on public exhibition. He is wanted in person at the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield. An army of listeners like his voice over that way, as hereabouts. Maybe they'll put him in the poultry division, to pit his chords against the cock crowing at dawn.

Two former Hub personalities who had wide local following not long ago, are at present working as WGY artists in Schenectady, N. Y. Hank Keene, the "Connecticut Hillbilly" and Bob (Old Man Sunshine) Pierce, now have daily program places there.

Who misses the Four Mills Brothers? Well, I do . . . Ditto as to "The Gossipers" comedy . . . Nice letter from "Hum and Strum" in the mail . . . The two former New England songsters are WTAM headliners in Cleveland . . . Heartiest chuckling was provoked by the WHDH voice while introducing the "Men of Ohio" march composition. He termed it a tribute to "native sons of the Keystone State" and he'll no doubt draw some "pan mail" if he was perchance heard in Pennsylvania.

Gas Is Deadly by New Method

By Associated Press

Paris, Sept. 18 — The newspaper Le Jour said today a method which makes poison gases deadly for eight days has been perfected by German chemists.

A special absorbent clay is impregnated with gases, then dried and sprayed from an airplane exhaust, the newspaper said, in the form of a fine powder.

Le Jour's correspondent said he followed the experiments at the Oster Riederer factory in Bavaria, and that the results were regarded as highly satisfactory by the German general staff.

Ground sprayed by the powder, it was claimed, forms an impregnable barrier, preventing not only the occupation of strategic positions by troops but making the evacuation of cities by civil populations impossible.

DRUG WEEK SET FOR OCT. 8

From behind the semi-obscurity of their counters come the "hardest worked professional men in the country" to celebrate National Pharmacy Week from October 8 to 13.

Often called "the man behind the guns" in medicine, it is the druggist upon whom a doctor must depend for the proper carrying out of his prescriptions.

It is estimated that there are 50,000 druggists in the country. In the observance of the ninth annual pharmacy week, they plan to bring before the public the dependability, resourcefulness and training of the man who hangs over his corner shop the sign, "Registered Pharmacist."

Waldorf AT THE SIGN OF THE RED APPLE

New!

GRILLED FRANKFURTS with Broiled Banana, Sliced Fresh Tomatoes, Whole Kernel Corn, Rolls and Butter . . . 25c
(Served 4 P.M. to 9 P.M.)

A BROILED BANANA with Grilled FRANKFURTS

. . . EVER SINCE WE BEGAN TO feature these new banana menus, the thought has been in my mind that the delicious flavor of a broiled banana would blend particularly well with the delicately spiced and rather pungent taste of the famous Waldorf grilled frankfurts.

● So we tried them out . . . and the results were a revelation to us. Indeed this combination is extremely delicious, particularly with the addition of the sliced ruby-red tomatoes, "whole kernel" corn, and the usual dainty rolls and butter. I certainly hope you order this menu for Tuesday.

● The dessert banana "special" is iced marble angel cake, covered with fully ripened sliced bananas and whipped cream. That, too, has a wonderful flavor.

● As usual, for breakfast, we are featuring the increasingly popular sliced bananas with either corn flakes or shredded wheat . . . hearty and satisfying.

● New England people surely are taking to bananas, more and more every day!

FALL RIVER TO ASK TROOPS TO GUARD REOPENED MILLS

that the Ely declaration was announcement that the national guard will be used in specific reopening cases, inasmuch as the state police force numbers only slightly more than 200 men.

Elsewhere in the New England area diversified conditions existed in the strike zones.

The strike gained ground in Maine when the big Pepperell plant in Biddeford, employing 3800, shut down this morning following a picket demonstration during the night.

Howard R. Whitehead, president of the mill, said that the decision to close the plants was made after several employes had been threatened. The Pepperill Mill has a weekly payroll of $65,000.

Officials of the York Mill in Sacco, where 600 workers are employed, announced that the mill would be kept open for the present. Only a small number of employes in this mill have left their machines.

LAWRENCE STANDS FIRM

All was quiet on the Rhode Island front, scene of death and rioting last week.

A large number of militiamen who have been on duty in Woonsocket since last Thursday have been withdrawn from the streets but are being kept in the Nourse Mills in event of trouble.

City officials announced today that many of the striking mill workers had appealed for city aid and that some had been given employment as laborers in various municipal departments.

The ban on the sale of liquor in Woonsocket was lifted today and the ban on dances will be lifted Saturday.

Lawrence workers continued to ignore the strike and Lawrence police continued to give them adequate protection. Police peacefuly dispersed 47 pickets from Lowell who gathered outside the Lower Pacific Mills this morning.

Police continued to enforce the rule that no picketing will be permitted at any mill where there is no strike.

More than 200 employes of the Arlington Mills signed a letter to the police authorities thanking them for protection and requesting the policy be continued.

In the case of Fall River, however, the police force is so small, due to the city's financial stringency, that the force is not adequate to provide tha protection needed.

ELY PROMISES GUARD

Governor Ely's stand on this question became known in Springfield, where he was attending the Eastern States' Exposition. He said:

"If any body of men employed in a particular factory should bring me a petition or a resolution, subscribed to by a substantial majority, stating that it was their desire to work . . . such a petition should be granted and they should be protected against violence and disorder . ."

The Monson millworkers had already gone on record to the effect that their majority wants to work and the matter of formally presenting their petition was the test today.

Mayor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River was expected to present to the governor a report about the situation in his city. He has just with representatives of the American Federation of Textile operatives and the U. T. W. A.

Again this bore on the Governor's statement. About 3500 of the A. F. T. O. voted no strike, 8000 of the U. T. W. voted strike and about 10,000 other workers are unorganized. Incidentally, Fall River, now in the hands of a state commission because of financial difficulties, had 780 additions to its welfare rolls.

ELY STAND SCORED

The defense committee calling upon Gov. Ely consisted of Prof. Kirtley F. Mather, of Harvard University; Alfred Baker Lewis, Socialist candidate for Governor; Powers Hapgood and Mary Donovan Hapgood, strike directors; John B. Wheelwright, Jessica Henderson and Donald Burke, the last named a companion of Ann Burlak, "Red Flame."

This committee's purpose, it avowed was to "avoid repetition of the shootings in Rhode Island last week and to ask Governor Ely to reaffirm his stand that the National Guard would not be called out."

The National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, with headquarters in Boston and a membership of millowners representing 9,000,000 of 11,000,000 spindles in New England, declared today that a canvas of general opinion in mill towns showed "overwhelming support of the principle of the right to work during a strike."

MILL WINS INJUNCTION

The Mt. Hope mill in Dighton, for the last fortnight entrenched behind sandbags, with armed guards on patrol, was secure today behind a legal barricade.

Judge Greenhalge of the Bristol Superior Court granted a temporary restraining order against labor leaders. It forbade strikers to "interfere with the company's business, or annoying, molesting or hindering any persons in the employ of the plaintiff."

The temporary injunction granted the Defiance Bleachery in Barrowsville was ordered continued until Thurslay, when a hearing will be granted on whether or not it will be semi-permanent.

TROOPS GUARD MILLS

The second day of the strike in Biddeford saw little activity at the mill gates, due chiefly to a heavy downpour of rain which kept pickets undercover. National Guards patroled in the vicinity of the mill in company with state troopers and special officers.

Waterville, where stones were hurled at workers and mill windows yesterday, reported no noteworthy activity.

Besides Biddeford and Saco, National Guardsmen, 700 of whom were on duty, patroled mill areas in Augusta, Skowhegan, Brunswick, Snegerville and Pittsfield.

Governor Cross of Connecticut ordered the demobilization of units of the National Guard when it became apparent that the soldiers no longer would be needed.

Several companies of the National Guard had been assembled in armories throughout the State for 24 hours in anticipation of trouble in Norwich, Putnam and Danbury, but a decision of mill owners to keep their plants closed made it unnecessary for the presence of troops in the mill areas.

MILL STRIKERS PLAN TO CALL 100,000 MORE

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 18—The Executive Council of the United Textile Workers met in closed session today to wrestle with the most serious problem now confronting strike leaders—that of providing relief to strikers and their families.

At the same time the union leaders, who came here from their respective stations along the textile front, were to act on the recommendation of the strike committee that 100,000 workers in miscellaneous divisions of the industry be ordered to join strike ranks.

An order making the strike effective in every division of the industry was expected to be announced today or tomorrow. This would include silk dyers, rayon and synthetic yarn workers, knit goods, underwear carpet, plush, pile fabric and rug operators.

Most of them are employed in small plants, but a strike of silk dyers would affect some 10,000 in Paterson, N. J., area.

Vice-presidents arriving from the strike centers reported steady increases in strike ranks and expressed indignation at tactics employed in some areas by police officers and mill guards.

"Police activity in many places is reprehensible," said John Peel, in charge of the strike in the South. "For example, in Greenville, S. C., police actually took union application cards away from 25 workers at one time. These workers had signed their union membership cards when police confiscated them."

Carolina Opens More Mills Under Bayonets

By Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 18—Gaston County, North Carolina's large textile center, today began its "big push" against the tight hold the general textile strike has held on the area for 18 days.

Nine plants re-opened this morning, with an estimated 1200 persons on the job, bringing the total of operating plants to 15 of the county's 104. The number of persons at work jumped to approximately 3200, with 22,800 still idle.

National Guardsmen, heavily equipped with machine guns and tear gas, patrolled the area at opening time and held pickets back from the mills, but no disorder developed.

More Troops Called to Guard Georgia Mills

By Associated Press

Atlanta, Sept. 18—Two additional national guard companies swung into action on the Georgia textile strike front today as more mills, under protection of Governor Talmadge's martial law decree, resumed operations.

Two Macon guard units were sent into textile areas outside Macon. Company B went to Austell to open the huge Clark Thread mill, and Company C into the textile area at Cedartown. Both companies are in the 121st infantry regiment.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Thompson, Jr., assistant adjutant-general in charge of the camp, said:

"Everything is running smoothly. We extended our water system this morning to provide bath accommodations. Other sanitary accommodations have been provided. Those interned seem in good spirits."

Strikers Must Work if They Get U. S. Relief

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 18—Officials of the Federal Relief Administration said today able-bodied textile strikers would have to work for relief payments like any other applicant for aid.

They reported applications from strikers had been received by relief organizations in every state affected by the textile walkout, and that these applications were receiving exactly the same treatment accorded ordinary relief requests. One official said:

"The application of strikers are being investigated, like all other cases, to determine if actual need exists.

"Where relief jobs are available, which needy strikers can fill applicants are being required to work for their benefit like anybody else."

Officials said protests of discrimination against strikers—such as that registered by Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the textile strike committee—were due to misunderstanding.

It was related that a group of textile workers who had been on relief rolls prior to the strike wanted to be freed for full-time picket duty. Relief officials insisted they continue working two or three days a week.

U. S. RULE BANS STRIKE RIOTS

By International News Service

Washington, Sept. 18—Acts of violence by strikers are banned under a precedent-setting decision of D. A Moscovitz, counsel of the Petroleum Labor Policy board, which was made public today.

In effect the decision establishes the principle that "even the heat of anger and stress and excitement of a strike do not justify acts of violence by employes."

While the decision was given in an oil strike situation, at the plant of the Champlin Refining Company, Enid, Okla., the broad implications of such a policy in the present wave of strikes over the nation lent unusual importance to the pronouncement.

REDS IN GENEVA HAIL SOVIET

By Associated Press

Geneva, Sept. 18 — Communist placards distributed in Geneva welcomed Soviet Russia into the League of Nations as the assembly prepared today to admit her formally into the international family.

The signs pasted on windows of many stores during the night said:

"Welcome to the union of Socialist Soviet republics, which brings us peace."

Leon Nicole, head of the Socialist Geneva government, issued an order to police to intrrfere no longer with persons wearing red caps.

The action of the League's political committee in recommending Russia for entrance clinched matters yesterday, but the assembly must make a formal vote. The Netherlands, Portugal and Switzerland voted against a favorable report.

LEAGUE SEEKS CHACO PEACE

By Associated Press

Geneva, Sept. 18—The juridical committee of the League of Nations decided today to concentrate on conciliation to end the war between Paraguay and Bolivia in the Chaco boreal.

The committee decided the assembly has the right to proceed with an inquiry under Article XV of the League Covenant, which provides for conciliation.

The problem was referred to the juridical committee by the political committee, which made a request for urgent action.

Ice and Slap Revenge Sweet For Astrid and Loretta

Hollywood, Sept. 18—When a movie script calls for the throwing of pitchers of ice-water on negligee-clad Loretta Young, Loretta's alleged screen rival, Astrid Allwyn, is all for realism.

So enthusiastically, in fact, did Astrid perform her water-tossing duty in the course of the filming of a recent scenario that the well-drenched Miss Young, after coming up for air, announced emphatically that fun was fun, but she'd yank that so-and-so's blonde tresses out by the roots if the ice-water target practice needed any more rehearsals.

Loretta's revenge, as it happened, wasn't long in coming. It became her non-to-onerous task to land a "stage" slap on the lovely Miss Allwyn's cheek. Immediately, realism had another inning. The smack could be heard all over Hollywood, and Loretta was ready to repeat as often as cameramen and directors might wish.

All rounds, to date, therefore, are approximately even, with both contestants still in the ring. They've ostensibly kissed and made up—just as grudge fighters shake hands. But they're living in hopes . . . of pie-throwing roles . . . in a custard pie comedy.

Four Dead in Manila Strike

Manila, Sept. 18 (AP)—Manila's first fatal strike riot claimed its fourth victim today. Several others of the score injured yesterday when police fired riot guns into a crowd of hundreds of cigar strikers and sympathizers may die, hospital attendants say.

Taxes Bring Tough Times

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

New York is having a tough time taxing business.

Some merchants say "Give us the tax, and you take the business."

Others say "Okay! But wait until it gets here."

That's why Tammany always comes back strong after a reform administration. Tammany never taxes anything because it leaves nothing.

The reformers try to build up a surplus from a deficit, and all the taxpayers remember is that taxes were high during the reform administration.

So the next election they vote against tall taxes, and back comes Tammany like the cat that was in the river.

MISS KATHERINE W. THAYER TO WED CHARLES E. CHANNING

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

NEWPORT . . . We were steaming out into the broad waters off the Queen City, surrounded by palatial yachts with their well known skippers aboard, the Vanderbilts, Morgans, Astors, Baker, Arthur Curtis James, Sears, Crowninshield, Aldrich and others ...Bands were playing, flags were flying on the sturdy vessels of the Eastern S. S. line, which sent them down laden with yachting fans from Boston, Providence, New Haven, New Bedford, and all points east...

MRS. JOHN NICHOLAS BROWN

The George Washington, Acadia, Florida, Steel Pier, as well as the Evangeline, were packed to the gunwales with a laughing, cheering throng...It was a memorable sight to see hundreds of boats weigh anchor at the same moment, almost, for the racing field...Jockeying for a good position to see the start.

Captain Corning carried off the honors of the day, we think, for his excellent navigating of the Evangeline...We were in fine position to see the Endeavour and Rainbow hoist their sails, tack into position to go over the line, and follow them all day with unobstructed view...It was interesting to see the coast guards and other official boats patrolling the lines to prevent wayward craft drifting in too close.

Loudspeaker messages came booming over the waters every few moments, "Flying Dutch change your course," "Social Register take a thirty degree course to the right," etc., etc. There was a heavy fine for those who did not obey these orders at once and they were towed back to port...

• • •

Spectators Watched Listlessly

ON BOARD THE EVANGELINE, a solid line of deck chairs marked the ebb and flow of the smart set...There seemed to be a spirit of apathy among them although we are by this time used to the New England self-contained temperament...We threaded our way around among the little groups from time to time to see what was going on. On the whole they took a genuine interest in the two pairs of white wings which filled the horizon, making comment in accord with their familiarity with the subject...

At one time, when the Endeavour looked as though she would pass the Rainbow, there was genuine excitement aboard, but something happened and she dropped behind...All settled down then to watch the clock to see if the Rainbow would beat the precious minutes to get in on time to win the race...It was no race by six minutes.

• • •

Waited for Vanderbilt Cheer

WE WAITED ALL EVENING for our sportsmen to give three cheers for "Mike" Vanderbilt for his remarkable performance of the day (even if it was not counted a race). They toasted John Lawrence, who was on the bridge all day: B. Nason Hamlin, who tried vainly to get up a little enthusiasm for something, and General Francis Peabody, whose speech was lost in the din of dinner, and Richard Ely Danielson.

About 200 came aboard at Newport to view this international classic from the decks of the Evangeline . . . Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield sailed down on Cleopatra's Barge II, to arrive on our boat with her party for the race . . . We glimpsed the Gordon Abbotts, Jr., and a crowd of young marrieds climbing aboard, John Nicholas Brown and his bride, Frances Williams squired by Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Mrs. Ralph Hornblower, the Reggie Birds, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Taff, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Greenough, and many other familiar faces.

Crowds of men came down stag, among them Mr. Horace Gade, Mr. Charles Tifft, Mr. Albert Creighton, Mr. Francis B. Lothrop, Mr. Joseph D. Leland, Dr. Derby, Mr. Frederick H. Curtiss, Mr. Louis Liggett and Mr. Rogers, Mr. Charles S. Bird, Jr., and Mr. Christian Herter, the handsomest man on the ship. Mr. Herter is joint sponsor of the cruise.

Thrills in Going Ashore

AFTER THE RACE, WHICH WASN'T A RACE, the task of getting the Newport crowd back on shore was an exciting spectacle . . . Because of the large number of boats milling around in the harbor the wash of the waves against the ship was terrific and the taxi-launches, which bobbed alongside, had great difficulty tieing up to the ladder put over the side . . . Time and again they chugged up only to lose the ropes and have to come round again.

Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr.

Passengers who had the courage to go down the gangway and jump into these small motor launches got cheers from the onlookers . . . It was perilous and many gave up the attempt. It was long after dark and the lights in the harbor were aglow before the last boatload left for the shore and the New York Yacht Club, where many gathered for a merry evening.

We gave up the idea of going in, as there might have been a bit of uncertainty about our getting back on time and the first edition must go on . . . So we stayed on deck until the evening breezes made us famished and went down into the saloon for a gala dinner. Notwithstanding that many had gone, the dining room presented a picture of good cheer and the tables were almost all taken.

"The End of the Cruise"

AFTER THE TOASTS, the crowd went up into the smoking room, where the orchestra was playing and dancing was enjoyed by many, especially by General Francis Peabody, who kept the Fair Things right on their toes as he pirouetted around... He kept the conductor busy playing lively tunes. Mr. Charles S. Bird, Jr., and Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson swayed to the beautiful rhythms of an old-fashioned waltz and were roundly applauded . . . They are both excellent dancers of a day, when the dance was an expression of grace and romance. The party was quite gay . . .

Sound of loud guffaws and cheering lured us on deck where the ponies were . . . A group of sportsmen were lining them up and all bets were ON. This is certainly great fun when the crowd have the right spirit . . . and they did. We would have lost our sleep if we hadn't slipped away quietly . . .

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Madge feels easier in mind as the young people get their cues in the "war" to keep Avis Arlen from seeing Noel.

CHAPTER 143

THE FOUR earnest young faces looking at me took on, as one, a look of grim determination, as I voiced my request concerning Avis Arlen. There was also sardonic mischief in each pair of eyes, and my fear suddenly found itself calmed. They were so efficient and enthusiastic a group that I felt Avis would have to pit more than even her unusual cunning and effrontery against their united front

"Let's be sure that we have it straight," Ronald said quietly. From the second Avis lands here until Noel and Mary are safely started on their trip, Avis is not to see Noel alone. Is that it?"

"Precisely," I returned, and then Bob interposed with a thought evidently of past experiences of his own: [illegible] she should be brash enough to [illegible] it's hard for a man to be rude to a girl, and Noel's so polite—"

AVIS VAMPED HANK

"That's just where I expect you four to function expertly and efficiently," I told them smiling. "I know of no four young people who possess more imagination, ingenuity and resourcefulness. I am counting upon you, although of course, the older people are also going to be on guard. But we shall have so many other distractions that our chief dependence must be on you four:"

"Auntie Madge!"

Marion stopped abruptly as she uttered my name, and I smiled encouragingly at her.

"Yes, dear, what is it?"

Don't you think we ought to tell Bill and Hank about this, too?"

A ready affirmative was upon my lips, then memory of the summer came to me, and I hedged

"Bill, surely Tell him everything and emphasize that I asked you to tell him about it. But I am not so sure of Henry's discretion."

[illegible] heart," Carolyn put in pertly. "If you remember that party last summer, dear Avis put quite a dent in young Hank. It's the surest thing you know that if other chances fail, she'll sink the talons into Hank and make a [illegible] for the good of the cause."

"I don't know what you mean" [illegible]

A GREETING FOR AVIS ARLEN

[illegible]

"Nevertheless, that's your especial job," he said. "Mrs. Graham [illegible] ter tell Hank, but it will be your job to keep him so interested that he won't come to heel when Avis beckons him."

"That's oke by me." Carolyn capitulated suddenly. "How much shall I tell Hank, Auntie Madge?"

"Whatever you think best for him to know; nothing, or much," I decided quickly.

"All right, I'll take over that little job." Carolyn said. "But just let me hand you boys a hot tip," she went on. "There's only one way to keep Avis away from Noel, and that's for both of you to give her such a rush that she'll think she's dishing Marion and me. A good mess of tripe, but if Marion can stand it, I can; so from the time Avis gets here, you can spell each other in giving imitations of being sunk without a trace by her charms."

"You're crazy!" Bob and Ronald said in a breath. "We can't do it"

"You mean you won't," Carolyn told them sweetly. "But you're going to. There's only one thing I'm asking.

"What's that?" Bob asked sulkily

"As soon as Mary goes and the opportunity's right, I want to drop a hint to La Belle Arlen as to the real reason for her sudden popularity."

Birthday Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The young man I go about with and whom I am to marry next fall is to have a birthday very soon. I have been thinking of giving him a dressing gown and slippers. Do you think this would be quite all right? K.

Yes

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

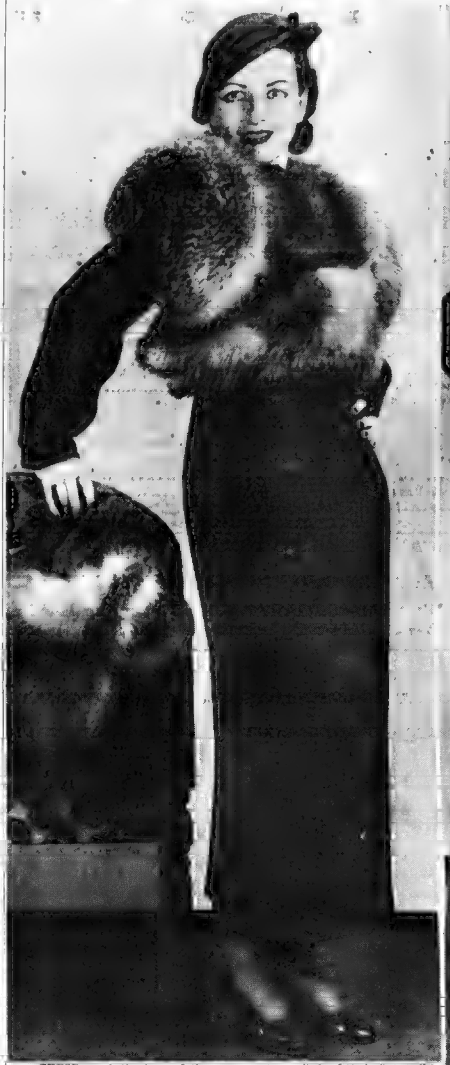
Dear Mrs. Beeckman

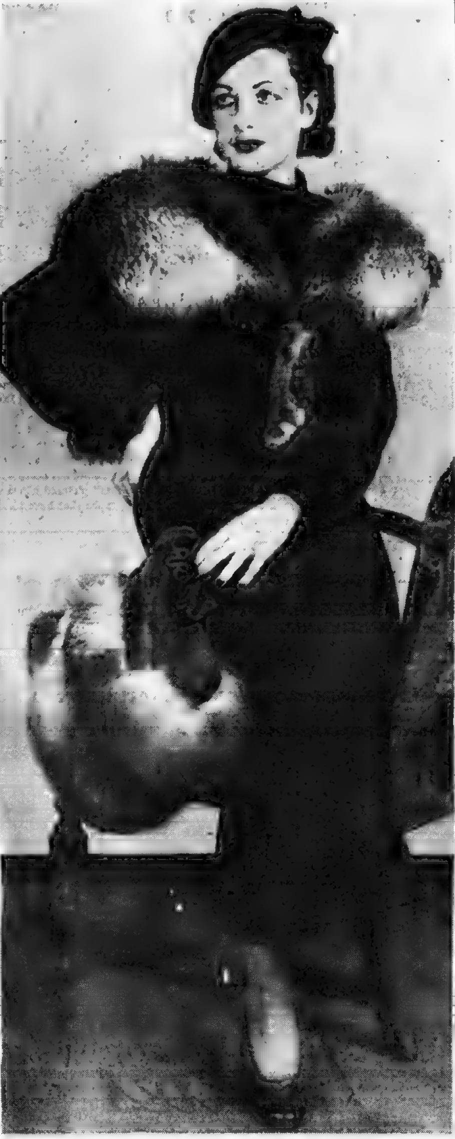
I would like to know the correct gift to give for a seventeenth and a twenty-second anniversary. F.

There are no special symbols suggested for those "in-between" anniversaries. As gifts for them we send anything appropriate for the home of the hostess and host.

NEW LOTION 'DIGS' INTO YOUR SKIN FOR THE HATEFUL LITTLE BLEMISHES

Such Lovely Luxury, When So Versatile, Fits Easily Into Role of Budget Aid





THESE are both views of the same coat—a slimly fitted, diagonally ribbed black wool tying snugly at the left side, accompanied by a lavish separate set of cross fox that may be worn backwards, forward, or any way you like best, and a fabric and cross fox muff that Paris smiled upon. The coat with its snug neckline may be worn smartly without the fox set. Tailored Blouse Has Peplum

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERNS 9132 AND 9133

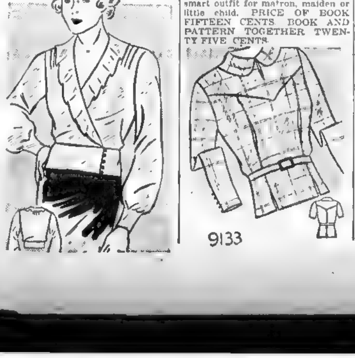
One of the most pleasant things about the returning vogue of the suit is that blouses are again high style. Women who pride themselves upon the ability to make a limited budget go a long way love their blouses. Think of the same suit, for instance, with the two different blouses sketched today Pattern 9133 is a simple affair of tailored lines with pleats that flare out at the bottom in a chic little peplum effect. Pattern 9132 has its becoming surplice accentuated by a graceful frill.

Pattern 9132 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 2¼ yards 39 inch fabric.

Pattern 9133 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards 39 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern, THIRTY CENTS (30c) for both. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

THE FALL AND WINTER ISSUE of the MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK is now off the press. It is big fashion news . . . and delightful reading . . . filled with stunning and easy-to-make patterns for street and house dresses, blouses, skirts, lingerie, clothes . . . all essentials of a smart outfit for matron, maiden or little child. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY FIVE CENTS.



Make "Helping" Fun, Not Task, for Children

By LISA GRENELLE

YOU GO VISITING and find yourself in a household where all the young people seem to be endowed or afflicted with that "helpful spirit." How do they get that way? Are they born with inherently sweet and unselfish dispositions?

Perhaps these model children are imbued with moral tales—unselfish little boys and girls reaping an inevitable reward.

No, this family is different, not one of them, but all of them. And there must be some reason —Ah you have it, they've been brought up by the old-fashioned method, by aid of strap and evenings in bed, without supper. You look eagerly for a trace of such discipline, but no signs could be discerned in any of these children—not one—they all had an unquestioned buoyance—a cheerful, unrepressed air.

And then you discovered the secret. It had really been there before your eyes all the time. The mother was always offering to help the children.

Such an animated interest did she take in every project, every ambition and every problem of each and every child; that it was contagious. Her desire and love of helping them was so genuine, and she got such fun out of it, that all the children just naturally got the idea that helping was fun, more fun than anything else

Successful Suicidal Psychic

By Mrs. Culbertson

IT IS GENERALLY conceded that the worst form of "psychic" is the Opening bid which apparently offers no hope of fulfilment, made when you have no suit in which to run out if you are doubled But even players who realize the dangers of such psychics occasionally fall prey to an irresistible impulse to try one out. Unfortunately for the cause of sound Bridge, the impossible contract forced upon the psychic bidder is sometimes made through a conspiracy of minor miracles. For example:

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		Pass	Pass
2NT (1)	Pass	3NT	Pass (2)
Pass (3)	Pass

(1) The South player was a notorious third hand psycher. He knew that no bid of one he could make in this spot would "stick," and chose to gamble on the psychic bid that was most likely to result in a catastrophe.

(2) What can East do but pass?

(3) Undoubted, it is only fifty points per trick; furthermore, South has no place to run.

West opened the diamond six. North played the nine, East the Jack, and South won with the King. South next led the club deuce and finessed the ten East won with his Ace and properly returned the three of diamonds, his fourth-highest of West's suit West now jumped to the hasty conclusion that East had held exactly Jack-three of diamonds originally, in which case he would set up an extra trick for South if he won with the Ace, so he played the [illegible]

Strong Melting Action Solves Old Problem

By Juliet Shelby

IT'S BAD ENOUGH to have to leave the sea and the woods and the golden September sunshine and return to town to face the same old tasks without being driven mad trying to recondition a ravaged skin

The smooth, winter-time clarity of your skin is destroyed by blackheads lurking under the surface and by enlarged pores. A skin so infected must be cleansed daily.

• • •

With a new blackhead lotion and a [illegible] ointment [illegible] can have [illegible] complexion [illegible] make you feel, if [illegible] Joan Crawford. In [illegible] a blackhead [illegible] the first of all [illegible] scrupulously [illegible] use a good [illegible] cream. If [illegible] try a liquid cleanser. With cleansing tissue wipe away surplus cream and then press a towel wrung out of hot water over your face. Leave it on until cool. Repeat three times. Now, with a pad of cotton, apply this special blackhead lotion. Rub firmly with a circular motion into infected part of the skin. This antiseptic medicinal liquid dissolves blackheads and impurities After it has been on about five minutes, repeat the hot towel applications. Remove lotion with the last towel.

• • •

If your face is badly blemished you can then smooth on a generous quantity of skin ointment that is put up by the same famous skin specialist Remove this ointment and with a soft cloth between the first finger of each hand, gradually and gently work out the now loosened blackheads. If you are careful, you will not bruise the skin. An astringent applied immediately afterwards will close the pores.

To learn the name of this [illegible] pests, and the name of the skin ointment, phone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston, along with your inquiry

Home Made Bleach

Question: Can you tell me of a home made bleach for hair on the arms and legs. Please help me as I do not wish to shave the hair.—M. M. H., Dover.

Answer: An excellent bleach for hair on the legs and arms is the following. Make a paste of chalk of magnesia and peroxide. Then add from 10 to 12 drops of ammonia Leave it on for ten minutes and wash off the clear water.

You are very wise not to start shaving your legs and arms. I am sure you will find this bleach makes the hair invisible

On Goes the March to Choosing of Legion Baby Winner

JEANINE GOLDEN

JOANNE BORDEN

EDWARD McCARTHY

With the measured beat of tiny feet the American Legion Baby Contest parade swings down the highways and byways of the many Massachusetts towns and hamlets recruiting new marchers as it goes along. Here are three of the latest recruits. They are, left to right, Jeanine Golden of East Dedham, Joanne Borden of Danvers and Edward Vincent McCarthy of Roslindale. To enter the contest, the purpose of which is to determine the typical American Legion baby in Massachusetts, a cabinet-sized photograph of the entrant should be sent to the James E. Welch Post, American Legion, sponsors of the contest, at 23 Phillips street, East Boston. Photographs are not accepted at the Boston American office. The young "cup contenders" pictured above were three selected at random from the host of photographs that have already come into the Welch Post headquarters.

Emmanuel College Has 88 Freshmen

Emmanuel College, beginning its sixteenth year, reported an enrollment of 88 freshmen. The total registration is expected to exceed 32[illegible] students.

Social activities will begin tomorrow with a [illegible], Marguerite Morris, Elra Tuckerman, and Doris Morrison. The opening mass will be celebrated by the Rev. John J. Lynch, S.J., Friday morning.

Rules Are Given for A. L. Baby Contest

With entries in the American Legion baby contest coming in faster every day, officials in charge of the contest emphasize again today that only Massachusetts babies are eligible. The baby's father or guardian, however, need not be a member of the Legion or an ex-soldier, sailor or marine.

Many of the entries have been received from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut, but, under the rules of the contest, all must be rejected and the photographs sent back.

The contest, sponsored by James E. Welch Post No. 58 of the Legion, is rousing wide response among parents throughout the state.

Any child of a Massachusetts voter or any child with a legal and registered voter as guardian is eligible in the competition.

Entries must be made by means of the baby's photographs, regular cabinet size. Photographs will be reproduced in the Boston Evening American—pictures selected at random—and any day the picture of your child entry may appear. Watch for them each day.

Staff members of various Boston hospitals will be judges of health in this contest. Personality of the entrants will be judged by associates of the Fox Film Corporation and members of the staff of the Boston Evening American.

Beaten Mother Unable to Appear

Mrs. Cutel Coley, 70, was unable to go to Lynn court, today, to testify as a principal witness against her own son, Earl Coley, arrested for assault and battery. Coley faced the assault charge after police say that they found him beating his mother in their home on Green street, Lynn.

Mrs. Coley was in bed this morning suffering from her injuries and hysteria. Her son's case was continued until tomorrow.

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Dr. George Crile, among the most famous of American surgeons, has recently pronounced certain obiter dicta calculated to cheer the hearts and lift the spirits of such Americans—however few there may be nowadays—who still believe in old-fashioned psychology, pedagogy and morals. He believes—and it is a pretty sensational announcement—that it is still possible to trust to reason.

Robert E. Rogers

Such an idea is still fairly unfashionable, though perhaps not as unfashionable as it was a decade ago. Mr. Dooley used to say that the Constitution follows the election returns. Similarly, I am inclined to believe that current fashions in the sciences are much more dependent on the election returns and the stock market and the indices of steel rail loadings than on scientific certainties.

It was just about 20 years ago that the Viennese Freud and his ideas first began to be known to little groups of serious thinkers in New York's Greenwich Village, who hailed joyfully the information that reason had been "proved" to be the fifth wheel to the human coach, that inhibitions and repressions were the sources of all evil, and that the libido ruled the roost. Simultaneously, or thereabouts, Watson and the Behaviorists "proved" that reason was the abject tool of our glands and reflexes, that all our thinking is only rationalizing, and that reason, therefore, is only a big bluff.

The war rather interrupted the popular spread of this doctrine. When peace came and the boom decade such ideas became commonplaces in the home and school and were adopted, particularly by our bright young people, as the law of the Medes and the Persians which altereth not. This philosophy rode on the crest of the boom wave. It is interesting to note that now it seems to be going out with the tide.

• • •

The diseases of civilization, says Dr. Crile, are nervous breakdowns, goiter, stomach ulcers, gallstones, diabetes, and the diseases of the heart. They are not found in primitive man or in the lower animals. They result from the high development of the "energy system," consisting of the brain and the thyroid gland, "which supplies man with his power of sustained energy and activity, mental, emotional and physical. The adrenal is the most active in the expression of emotions. This group of executive organs is primarily responsible for the state of civilized man."

If our organization is run at too high a speed, something breaks down, the nervous system or the heart or stomach or kidneys. Sometimes surgery and medicine can help. But the best cure is the despised and underestimated reason, which we have been told is only a servant and not the master of our body.

"Man cannot lessen his brain capacity, he cannot lessen his glandular power, but he has at his disposal the finest tool civilization has wrought, namely, his reason. The civilized fraction of man should be able to govern the wild fractions inherited from his long past."

• • •

Now this, of course, is no new idea. It goes back, by way of Thomas Aquinas, to no less a creative thinker than Aristotle. It goes on the assumption that there is such a thing as reason, presumably God's particular gift that differentiates us from the animals.

It denies John Locke's assumption that man starts with a blank sheet—tabula rasa—and derives everything from memory, association of ideas and environment. It denies the assumption of modern psychologists, including our own William James and so down, that reason is not an entity. It denies above all the Behaviorists' contention that thought is the result of behavior, not the cause of it, that it is only a kind of surface play of revery, the result of conditioned reflexes, and that, therefore, man can do little to control his life.

Which theory is true will probably never be ascertained. But which theory is fashionable and accepted is of the greatest importance. Certainly the point of view which persuades man that he is master of his fate and captain of his soul—within reasonable limits—is obviously much more wholesome than one which considers him the slave of his adrenals, the servant of his reflexes. It gives one faith in man and his possibilities.

• • •

J. C. Squire, English parodist and poet, once wrote a ballad burlesquing the idea that genius can be completely explained in terms of the bodily organs. The refrain went

"For Shelley had a hyper-thyroid face."

The Freudians and the Behaviorists may possess the truth. But it certainly is not the truth that will make us free. Freedom and effectiveness is much more likely to come from believing Dr. Crile's suggestion that even bodily disease and behavior can be controlled for the better by the use of reason.

"Mens sana in corpore sano." Note that the 'mens sana' is put first—as it should be.

JOBLESS MAN IS AWARDED $25 FOR NEWS TIP

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

An unemployed man, Walter Covel, of the Peoples' Palace, Salvation Army hotel in the South End, is the winner of the $25 first prize in the News Tip contest for the past week.

Covel was walking along Batterymarch street a few days ago when he saw Mrs. Catherine Mitchell, of Salem, plunge to her death from the 10th floor of the Oliver Building annex. He telephoned the News Tip Editor. His tip resulted in the Boston Evening American getting the news first.

DERN TIP BRINGS $10

Secretary of War George Dern came to Boston last week to confer with officials here when there was a possibility that the regular army might be called to quell textile strike disorders in Rhode Island. A man, whose identity is being withheld at his request, recognized the news value of the visit. He wins the $10 second prize.

Another man, who requests that his name be withheld, wins the $5 third prize for a tip on the resignation of three Norfolk Prison colony guards after an audit had revealed a shortage in accounts.

MANY $1 PRIZES

The following persons are awarded $1 each for tips on news stories:

Miss Stella Starr, 191 Charles street, Lowell, for tip on an explosion.

A man, whose name is withheld, for tip on arrival of Doris Duke, heiress, in Boston from Portland, Me.

Mrs. Greenfield, 330 Cross street, Malden, for tip on automobile crash.

Harry Costello, 911 Broadway, Somerville, for tip on body of a woman being found in Mystic Lake.

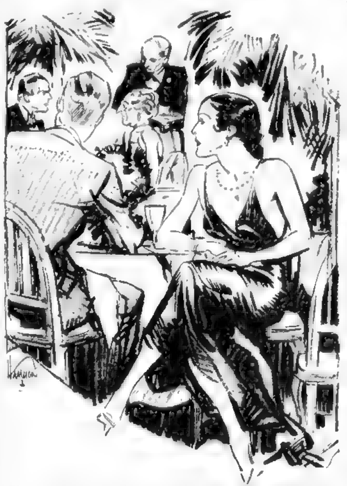
The News Tip contest is open to anyone, anywhere. News happens every place and is worth money. Call the News Tip Editor, Liberty 4000, when you see something of interest happening.



The amazing thing about the couple was that such a good looking chap should be escort to a woman who looked old and out of place with him.

Lynn Police Seek Missing Boy, Man

Lynn police have asked police throughout the state to be on the lookout for two Lynn residents reported missing. A 16-year-old English High School student, Emanuel Cocaras, of Shepherd street, Lynn, has been missing from his home since Tuesday. Mrs. Annie Derby of Salsbee street, Lynn, asked police to aid in locating her husband who disappeared over the week-end.

MOTHER IS HELD IN LYNN THEFT

With the arrest of Mrs. Annie Parini, 48, of Amity street, Lynn, on two counts of larceny, and the finding of dresses and other new merchandise in her home, police hope to solve a number of thefts reported by Lynn store owners.

The woman, it is alleged, would complain that her feet were aching and ask to rest in the stores, thus obtaining access to the stock. When she asked to rest in Levitt's shop on Summer street, Lynn, police say the proprietor recognized her as the woman who had stolen two dresses previously from the store.

What Happens in Beauty Parlors? What Price Must Woman Pay to Regain Her Lost Youth?

CHAPTER I

Juliet, without escort, was unquestionably a bit of attractive bait. In her black evening dress she positively glistened with temptation—a provocation enhanced by a distinguished, yet not-too-regal, aloofness.

After the waiter had taken her order, she inspected the diners and dancers with the slightly arrogant gaze of one to whom Life is but a liveried servant.

"Not a soul that looks interesting—naturally!"

Juliet had come down from her tiny room (minimum rate next the elevator) to the Cocoanut Grove because she was discontentedly hungry, because she wanted to sense the pulse of this unfamiliar city, but mainly because there was the dusty and lonesome feeling in her heart that strange hotels always aroused.

When the avocado salad she had ordered arrived she immediately felt more cheerful. This was because Destiny had decided on the sly to do something about Juliet without further delay, and the subtle elation she began to sense was really the preliminary thrill of new luck a-borning. The salad had nothing whatever to do with it.

To any unobservant eye, nothing extraordinary occurred in the next few minutes. Certainly the four middle-aged gentlemen, who leaned as though in a strong wind when they came into the Grove, were not recognizable as out-riders of Destiny's caravan.

Three of them wore flushed faces above smart tuxedos and spiced the festive atmosphere with their convivial and aromatic breath.

The fourth man, taller than the others, wore a plain gray suit and a somewhat more serious expression on his lean face. His gaze fell upon Juliet and she returned it unwaveringly.

SUPERIOR PERSON

"This man is a superior person," she announced to herself and continued courageously to look at him.

The three in tuxedos spied a group of hilarious friends at a table across the room and forward-pitched in that direction. The man in gray lingered behind and kept looking at Juliet.

"May I sit down?" he asked with a shadow of a smile, his hand resting on the back of the other chair at the small table.

"If you like," said Juliet in a smoothly-varnished voice.

"Thanks. Those other chaps were getting a little—tiresome."

Before him was a girl of 25 with bright seductive lips that seemed somehow to contradict the aloofness in her dark and fearless eyes. Her complexion was exquisite, the black hair lustrous, and she carried her head like a queen.

Win or lose, Juliet's head was the kind that would remain forever unbowed.

"We're down—a lot of us—from San Francisco for the Stanford-Trojan game tomorrow," said the stranger. "It's remarkable, isn't it, what idiots the big game makes out of fairly sensible men? A few drinks and they think they're 20 again."

Juliet smiled. "And you?"

"I merely envy their cheerful idiocy. I'm fifty, I know it and I don't try to keep up with the pack. But let me introduce myself—Terhune's my name. I'm a lawyer and I'm going back to San Francisco tomorrow night. Know lots of people in this town and here's a confession—I'm astonished at myself for accosting a strange young lady. I have only one defense—it's the Southern California climate."

"Does it always affect you this way?" Juliet asked, smiling.

"Never did before," Terhune said. "No, the simple fact is that I saw you sitting here so distingue and alone—so intelligent-looking and altogether charming—I thought how nice it would be to chat with you—just for a little while. Actually I'm quite harmless. Will you forgive me?"

"There's nothing to forgive," she said casually. "Why shouldn't people act naturally?"

The Cocoanut Grove was getting a bit tempestuous and Terhune's friends, apparently, were swallowed up in the tossing sea of humanity of dancers and harassed waiters. The pre-game celebration surged around them but its excitement left Juliet untouched. It was agreeable merely to drift along with Terhune's easy conversation.

"You're a courageous young creature," Terhune told her, later on.

"Maybe it's a pose," smiled Juliet. "You couldn't know really."

Expert Gives More Hints on Menu to Aid Limited Budget

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(This is the 12th of a series of articles on the increasing cost of living and how it can be met with economical measures.)

"My husband is an ERA worker and gets $12 a week," writes an interested woman. "I am going to ask you to straighten out my budget. I have tried. . There are just three of us, a boy, 16, who is a large eater, my husband and myself...We have just plain food...

"I pay $3 a week rent, $2.10 a month for gas, 90 cents a month for electricity, $1.75 a week insurance, $1 a week on furniture, 50 cents a week on small bills and my husband pays carfare of 80 cents a week. I give him 50 cents for spending money . Anyone who says you can get along on $12 a week does not figure it right...not if they are good eaters...

"I get two pounds of butter a week and five pounds of sugar and a dozen of 23-cent eggs.. So if you will be so kind as to show me a way out, I for one will be grateful."

DIFFICULT PROBLEM

A $12 weekly income is, of course, one in which many sacrifices must be made. It is difficult, to be sure, to maintain any kind of living standard on so small an income.

The following budget which I offer to those housewives whose husbands are turning in $12 weekly is definitely an elastic one. It is not to be taken literally to the last dot.

According to statisticians, economists and nutrition supervisors and all those brilliant exponents of the art of spending money, a $12 weekly income should be used as follows:

Food	$ 4.50
Clothing	1.54
Shelter	2.62
Fuel, Light	.61
Sundries	2.73
	$12.00

It has been tested and found that food budgets for men, employed either at hard, moderate or light work, require in the neighborhood of $2 weekly for their meals.

SALADS WILL SAVE YOU MONEY!

The difficulty with the housewife, whose letter I published in part, is perhaps to be found in her food budget. With only herself, her husband and her son in the family, two pounds of butter and five pounds of sugar are way out of proportion in relation to what the human body needs for nutrition and strength.

A more detailed knowledge of healthful menus might show this woman the way out should she gauge the amounts of her food purchases on the weekly grocery order outlined several days ago.

She must exercise the greatest care in buying and pursue the strictest economy in securing for herself and her family adequate nourishment.

She must take cognizance of such hints on cooking as these offered by Miss Blanche Diamond, nutrition supervisor of the Community Health Association.

Vegetables are often spoiled by over-cooking. From 10 to 25 minutes is long enough for most vegetables.

USE ALL LEFT-OVERS

The water in which vegetables are cooked should be saved and used for soups and sauces, or as broth.

Use left-over in making soup, pudding, hash and the like.

Use molasses instead of sugar once in a while.

A hearty salad may form the main dish for lunch or supper. Many combinations of cooked or raw vegetables are possible to which nuts and fruits can be added.

Cooked potatoes, raw onion and cucumber.

Prunes stuffed with cottage cheese or peanut butter on lettuce.

A cooked salad dressing is not expensive. It may be eaten by children for whom mayonnaise might be too rich.

Miss Dimond offers this cooked salad dressing, cheap to make, and good to eat:

Butter or butter substitute 3 tablespoons, flour 4 tablespoons, milk 1½ cups, sugar 2 tablespoons, mustard half teaspoon, salt 1½ teaspoon, eggs, one or two, vinegar half cup, pepper to taste.

If only one egg is used take 6 tablespoons of flour instead of four.

Melt the fat; add flour; stir until smooth. Add the milk and cook, stirring constantly, until a thick creamy sauce is formed; beat the egg and add seasonings; add the white sauce gradually to the egg mixture and cook over hot water like a custard; add vinegar; strain and cool; keep in a cool place.

Household economists maintain that if you want to feed your family well on a small amount of money, use more milk and less meat. They urge the use of meat or fish not more than once a day.

(In tomorrow's Boston Evening American another weekly menu will be offered that can be prepared and served for minimum cost.)

NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—A chit of a woman lawyer, with flashing black eyes and a magnificent sense of humor, has suddenly become the toast of London's Mayfair. No obscure outsider has so tilted the collective lorgnette since Michael Arlen peacocked his mignon way into celebrity.

O. O. McIntyre

She is the New York girl, Fannie Holtzmann, who won hands down the enormous film libel suit for the Princess Youssoupoff. When the case was handed to her it looked rather hopeless to expert legal minds. But she hopped the first boat to old Albion, where her activities suggested a fire-cracker.

When she won the initial round in the staid British court, thus bringing a world-wide settlement and a snug fortune for herself and client, the London press hailed her with a Page One huzzah. Leader articles extolled her and the cartoonists limned her across the inside pages. She was a novelty.

She put on a "victory celebration" in her flat that lasted most of the night and was described as a cross section of a royal garden and a West End first night. Crowds followed her along the streets in the manner of a prize fight champion. Even the Douglas Fairbankses were shoved out of the spot temporarily.

Up in the quiet precincts of East 233d street, hard by Woodlawn cemetery, is the center of the monument making industry. A refined and gentle atmosphere that suggests the peaceful area of those serene towns tucked away in Connecticut hills. The monument makers are mostly venerable, some octogenerians, who talk in subdued voices and tip toe about in marked solemnity.

P. G. Wodehouse's gentleman's gentleman, Jeeves, a composite of all British servants, is the favorite verygoodsir hero of butlers in real life. In England, the Long Island Hamptons and at Newport where the Jeeveses prevail, every butler has a Wodehouse omnibus on his pantry shelf. No other fictionist thought of glorifying this kind of servant until Wodehouse convulsed the world with him—that is no one save the unpredictable Harry Leon Wilson who did such a magnificent job with "Ruggles of Red Gap." But it was Wodehouse who made butlers Jeeves conscious. Employers say almost all make every effort to appear like their patron saint. To give buttling that certain stuff elbowed something.

The well trained English butler takes more pride in his calling than most servants. As a rule his father and grandfather buttled before him. He is pleased with his Oxonion-Cockney accents, his sway-backed entrance into the room and those slightly aloof bows from the waist in taking orders. They are the thriftiest of house workers, and as they are usually employed by rich men, have the best advice in investments. Their pot of gold at the end of the rainbow is a cottage in Surrey with ample garden and a set of Dickens. All English butlers love Dickens.

Micky Neilan tells of a Hollywood conference. A part had been read and those around the long table went into a ponder as to what actor would best fill the role. Someone exclaimed: "It was made for DeWolf Hopper." Another agreed: "Hopper is certainly the man." Others were as enthusiastic. At this point an office boy left the conference room. Returning ten minutes later, they were still agreeing Hopper was the man but wondering what they should do. "Why don't you send for Hopper?" observed the boy. "Young man," said the chairman of the board, "you are now an executive!"

And then there's Gene Markey's silly about the Scotsman hiring a riding horse. "Will you want him long?" inquired the attendant. And the Scot replied: "Yes, there will be eight of us."

In the gloomy Bowery pawn-shops they are known as "flashers." They come in limousines, with curtains drawn and dash across the pavements into uncle's. Often out of consideration the street door is locked so no one may enter while they are there. For they are Grade A customers. Usually they are ladies playing bridge badly or have over-drawn their bank accounts and are pledging some personal adornment. They are the Bowery pawn-shops' ace patrons.

BANDIT NABBED BY WOMAN

Outfought and knocked out by a woman in whose home he sought refuge from police, Arthur Mansfield, 32, of Dudley street, Roxbury, today faced charges of robbery and attack in Roxbury court.

His conqueror, Mrs. Myrtle V. Basford, 43, was recovering from severe laceration of the scalp and a broken thumb, received when Mansfield, police say, swung a heavy chair across her head in an attempt to subdue her.

Phone in News Tips to the Boston American and Advertiser — Win $50 Weekly in Prizes

Do you want to make some money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American and the Sunday Advertiser are presenting the opportunity. Every week a total of $50 in prizes will be given for news tips telephoned in to the News Tip Editor at Liberty 4000. And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an important meeting is scheduled for a certain date, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger, that a celebrity is coming to town? That's a news tip. There will be given $25 weekly for the best first exclusive news tip received, $10 for the next best, $5 for the next best and $1 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. This offer is now in effect. Remember that SPEED is the watchword. First to the telephone wins the award. News tips mean money.

"[illegible] Terhune. "You've travelled, but, I think, you've never quite found a place to anchor. And I don't think you are overwhelmingly interested in romance or marriage. You want more [illegible] existence than just [illegible]

[illegible]

"That I cannot state—and neither [illegible] the usual fragility of love. It's a mysterious treasure chest—this future of [illegible] draw out of it all manner of thrilling and satisfying and sustaining joys. You want life to be better than it is for the rest of the herd—a breathless something you cannot give a name to."

"Go on, please," she urged.

"There is a new type of people coming into existence who aren't satisfied with the old things," continued Terhune. [illegible] delightful [illegible] and [illegible] one of them—these new people. It's come over the world quite rapidly. [illegible] were [illegible] I would sign up with your crowd myself."

JULIET SURPRISED

Juliet was surprised to find herself breathing a little more deeply.

"Perfectly [illegible]," she exclaimed defiantly.

"The truth [illegible] answered Terhune suavely. "Well, we've had our little chat and now I'm [illegible] I [illegible] enjoyed knowing [illegible] like strange ships passing [illegible] in the night—exchanging [illegible] and going [illegible] ports. But before I go I want to introduce you to the oddest and most interesting woman in Los Angeles. You'll [illegible] because you're both so [illegible] different."

Juliet saw his gaze move to another table where a handsome youngish man was bitterly quarreling at a hawk-faced old woman with hunched shoulders, a black silk dress, and a diamond dog-collar around her scrawny throat.

They were quarreling about a matter that lay roughly somewhere between manslaughter and murder.

Juliet's attention moved to the youngish man [illegible] grotesque old woman [illegible] He seemed to [illegible] of 3[illegible] feet [illegible] deed.

The amazing thing about the couple was that such a good-looking chap should be in a place as glamorous as the Cocoanut Grove as escort to a woman who looked like an old black crow caparisoned in somber silk and diamonds. Juliet was certain she had never seen him before, but, disturbingly, she felt she had seen him somewhere, but the recollection stuck obstinately in the back of her mind like a forgotten word.

"The old woman's name is Hubert—Madame Hubert," Terhune informed her. "I've known the [illegible] fortune out of the oldest profession [illegible] Madame Hubert has built up one of the great beauty institutions of the world. A lofty building, employing a hundred or more masseuses, hairdressers and the like. There is a face-lifting department, with a Heidelberg graduate in charge. She has graduate nurses and chiropodists and even a discreet string orchestra in her salon—a regular perfumed beauty factory where they do remarkable things to women's appearances. [illegible] more lovely [illegible] Burbank did the same thing to flowers."

Terhune paused and beckoned a waiter to bring the check.

"And the man with her?" Juliet asked.

"Her general manager—name's O'Hara. Keen chap. But Madame Hubert is a queer old party—absolutely without personal vanity, except for her diamonds. She likes to get around a [illegible] what's going in the cafes and theatres. Makes O'Hara take her—but it's purely professional. She's one of the few people in town worth knowing."

"I'm sure of it," replied Juliet, as flickering sparks of interest began to bob around in her brain.

Cash Waits Best Essay on 'Count of Monte Cristo'

Here's an opportunity for high school students of Greater Boston to share in the winning of $[illegible] in hard, cold cash! The prize will be given for the best essay on the [illegible] and dramatic value of Alexandre Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo," which, as a film, is now being shown at the Keith Memorial Theater.

The Boston Evening American and the Keith Memorial Theater are sponsoring this new essay contest which will provide high school students of Greater Boston lots of fun and a chance to earn some cash for school equipment.

Only the pen of an Alexandre Dumas could write of the adventures of Edmond Dantes, who, victim of a dastardly plot, is exiled as a prisoner on a lonely island, there to stay for years until, through the efforts of a kindly Abbe, also a life prisoner, he escapes from his horrible dungeon with the secret of untold riches buried on the Island of Monte Cristo.

W[illegible] Dantes re[illegible] as the Count of Monte Cristo and proceeds to mete out punishment to the men who made him spend [illegible] death for years and finally the reconciliation with his boyhood sweetheart.

All high school students can enter this contest by submitting an essay on the immortal Dumas classic by giving a concise and clear answer to the question "Was Edmond Dantes justified in seeking revenge on the men who exiled him to a living death?"

The first prize awarded for the best essay will be $10, the second $5 and 10 additional prizes of $1 each for the next 10 best essays. No essay should be more than 200 words, and written legibly.

Manuscripts must be in the hands of the Monte Cristo Contest Editor of the Boston Evening American, no later than midnight of Sept. 26.

'Button Me Up' Heard Again

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 18—Husbands, who have been free of the chore for several years, will soon again hear that old refrain:

"Please help me button my dress up the back."

Jewry Observe Atonement Day

B. J. Becker Still Tops Bridge Play

New York, Sept. 18 (INS)—B. Jay Becker, of Philadelphia, continued to hold his lead over 35 other contract bridge experts competing for the individual masters' championship of the American Bridge League at the start of the fourth round of play in the Hotel Ambassador today.

Becker's nearest opponent was M. D. Maier of New York. David L. Burnstine, defending champion, was in sixth place.

MAD MILLIONS

By Charles Grant

CHAPTER XXXVI

Jasper H. Ingram glanced at the headlines in the afternoon papers, which told the world about Arline's suit, and he no more than cocked an indifferent eyebrow.

How insignificant this affair was now, compared with the sensational news the morning papers would carry concerning the collapse of his great financial structure, the crash of his fortunes.

He wondered, though, if Laura, with her social consciousness, would not be upset by Arline's suit more than by the loss of money and position. She would never know that she had precipitated this final debacle.

Probably most men who end their lives as ruin stares them in the face, do so in the first despairing moment when their case seems hopeless. Jasper Ingram's fighting spirit, his great lusty love of life, combined with the deep sense of obligation he had to his stock and bond holders, carried him through that dangerous moment.

Just now, however, Jasper Ingram was, above all else, conscious of an immense fatigue. He [illegible] for rest.

In the left-hand drawer of his desk were some dozen steamship folders, which he dreamed over from time to time. He'd had few holidays in his strenuous hard-fighting life. If he could escape from this turmoil! There were countries in which he could find sanctuary, with no fears of extradition or molestation.

Alternating with these anticipated delights, the peace of mind and freedom of this Capua, was a sterner concept—a call to arms to fight his way back. There was still a possibility of saving his business honor and his prestige. If he could secure his own appointment as receiver or joint receiver for his bankrupt enterprises, Jasper Ingram was certain he could make a better showing for his investors than anyone else. His dreams had been vast, but his scheme had been basically sound.

Could he force his enemies to give him that chance? To remain here and work and fight for his opportunity to redeem himself was to lose that other chance for peace and rest and freedom from worry.

INVITING EXILE

Seward! How could he let the boy start life under such a cloud? What would be his prospects, with his own way to make, and with his father a deserter and his name a byword?

Jasper Ingram was still pondering the problem of his son when his private telephone buzzed, and Seward's voice sounded in his ears.

"Are you terribly busy, dad? Or may I come in? I'm just outside here—"

"Come in, come in!" cried Ingram.

Seward shut the door behind him. "It's a damned outrage!" he gasped. "I've only just seen it, dad, or I'd have been here before."

Jasper Ingram didn't know at first what the boy was talking about. But there was that in his voice and manner which was warming to the father. Then Ingram's face lighted up as he realized what his son was driving at.

"Oh, you're talking about the Martin girl and her suit!" smiled Jasper Ingram. "Yes, I saw the papers."

"Father, you don't know what I'd give to wipe out all I said to you about that girl. I made a fool of myself over her, but I wish to God I hadn't taken it out on you!" cried Seward.

"Well," said his father, "much of what you said was true enough. I haven't altogether led the sort of life most people consider good."

"But, gosh," said Seward, "where do I get off sitting in judgment on you?" His face reddened, but the constraint which he usually felt in his father's presence was gone.

"I've behaved like a cheap moralist, but I've always known what a great guy you are, dad, and you needn't think I haven't been proud of you. From the time I was a little kid, when I just knew, from the way people spoke of you, how important you were, I've felt like that.

"I want to amount to something, too, too, dad . . . I've got a reason for that I'll tell you in a minute . . . But I want to work like hell with you, if I can be of any help."

"My dear boy," was all that Jasper Ingram could say. But with his right hand he gripped Seward's.

SON FIRES COURAGE

He had been ready to surrender his sword, sick of the losing, lonely battle. But Jasper Ingram's heart took courage as he thought of turning back to that battle with his son at his side. Seward's expressions of love and faith instilled new life in him, new strength.

It was unthinkable, now, that Seward should have to learn not only of his father's failure and disgrace, but of his acknowledged guilt through an ignominous flight.

Suddenly Jasper Ingram knew that he would be appointed receiver. The old certainty of his power to achieve descended upon him.

He took a deep breath and squared his own shoulders. Then he smiled at Seward. "Son," he said, "I'm afraid you'll have to moderate your pride in your father because tomorrow it's going to be a case of, 'How are the mighty fallen!' Why, that Arline Martin business is nothing at all.

"Tomorrow, hell starts popping. We'll have to go through with that. There's a big job ahead of us, and a mighty mean one, but now I'm confident we can pull out of it and keep the Ingram name clean.

"In not inviting you to any picnic, son, and I want you to come in, if you can, with your eyes open. I'd be more than glad to have you with me, but you're not responsible for this mess—"

"Of course, I want to," said Seward. "I'm for you, right or wrong and I'm with you one hundred per cent." His eyes sparkled at the suggestion of difficulties and danger.

"Good boy!" said Ingram.

His telephone buzzed. "Hello!" he said—"Oh, Laura—"

Seward was suddenly struck with consternation. He hadn't told his father of his engagement to Cathleen. Now he would learn of it in the way his mother would distort it.

SCOFFS AT SUIT

"Oh, that's of no importance whatever—" said Ingram, his voice level and soothing. "Simply a crude attempt at extortion . . . just plain blackmail . . . No, I did not! . . . No, most certainly not . . . Is that all, my dear?"

But that was by no means all Laura Ingram had to say. Jasper's next exclamation was, "Engaged to be married! . . ." and he looked up in quick surprise at his son. Seward suffered agony as his mother talked on. What if his father should side with her? What if he should become so angry that he no longer would want him in the office? Suppose, when he hung up the receiver, he should send for Cathleen, denounce her and then discharge her!

But Seward's heart jumped as he heard his father say, "Why that's great, my dear! . . . Best thing that's happened in the Ingram family in a long time . . . Yes, of course, I know her . . . A fine girl . . . A beautiful girl . . . Much too good for him . . ."

"Father . . .!"

Ingram replaced the receiver and swung around. "Is Miss McCarthy—Cathleen—here? Why don't you bring her in, stupid?"

"Father," cried Seward. "Father, I think you're swell!"

When Seward had dashed off to get Cathleen, waiting in his car, Jasper H. Ingram sat back easily in his big chair, lighted a cigar and enjoyed a mental contentment he had not known for months.

This, he mused, was not the end. This was the beginning. A new start and a new deal. What a fool he'd been. He had driven himself within an ace of suicide in his mad pursuit of money.

It was that senseless lust in all of us, Ingram reflected, that brought us to the pass we're in today—this idea that we must have more, always more and more—

And he himself had been one of the worst offenders. Where had his sense of proportion been all this time? He had begun life poor. He feared poverty. And he had risen above it. Yet he might be poor again. What would it matter? Money! More money! More than any man had need for. Too much for his own good. We rich men, he thought, have nearly wrecked our country because of our mad scramble for more money. Well, he for one, had seen the light. And he only hoped he could build again for a fresh start—

Seward opened the door, his face eager and happy. "Here she is, father!"

Jasper Ingram rose from his desk and went forward to meet them. He took Cathleen's shy blushing face between his hands and kissed her on the forehead. "We shall have real need of you, Cathleen," said the great Jasper Ingram.

THE END

Tasty Dishes for Cool Weather

The cool days that are approaching make us think of hot luncheon dishes that are appetizing and nourishing in contrast to the light, refreshing meals we serve in summer.

Here are some particularly seasonable dishes. Plan to serve them with a crisp salad or a tart relish.

BACON, NOODLES AND EGGS

¼ pound package broad noodles
¼ pound sliced bacon
2 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper

Cook the noodles in boiling salted water until tender, place in a strainer, wash with cold water and drain. Cut the bacon into ½-inch pieces and fry slowly. When the bacon is crisp pour off most of the fat, add the seasonings and eggs, beaten with the milk, and the noodles. Scramble together just as you prepare scrambled eggs. Four servings.

BAKED STUFFED SQUASH

1 large patty pan squash
¼ lb. boiled ham, ground
½ clove garlic, chopped fine
2 tablespoons olive oil
¾ cup dry bread crumbs
Salt and pepper

Cut off top of squash and scoop out center. Parboil shell in boiling salted water. Mix pulp from center, discarding seeds if large, with ground ham, garlic, olive oil and ½ cup bread crumbs. Season with salt and pepper. Refill shell with this mixture and top with remaining crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) until tender, about 40 minutes.

'COMING SPRING' OPENS AT PLYMOUTH -:- CAROLE LOMBARD TAKES 'REPEAL' ROLE

Premiere Fails to Give Thrill to Mr. Holland; His Praise Goes to the Players

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Many years ago, as a kid reporter, your miserable correspondent—who admires Owen Davis, Sr., tremendously (and Owen Davis, Jr., too)—met a philosophical Yankee in a town not far from Ellsworth, Me., who declared between chaws: "Trouble with this vicinage"—he was literate and a graduate of at least Bowdoin and maybe Harvard—"is that folks attach permanence and importance to things which are not permanent nor important."

George Holland

That State of Maine sage who encountered this very casual existence in its impressionable spring said something which Mr. Davis, the perfect craftsman of the playwrights, said at length and always interestingly last night at the Plymouth Theatre where "Coming Spring," a new drama, was disclosed for the first time on any stage.

Worded in whatever way, however, the State of Maine and its habitues, as interpreted by that ear or [illegible] or by Mr. Davis in "Coming Spring" failed to give your woebegone chronicler a thrill. Mr. Davis, I think, attached more importance to his characters and their lives than is their due. When it was all done last night I had been made bleakly unhappy. There were wounds of disappointment, the sort of wounds one feels — and can't explain — when he has promised to pay back $20 on a certain date and can't quite make the grade.

* * *

It was my wish upon entering the Plymouth theater that I should totter toward an exit two and a half hours later with cheers on my fingers and thumb on my nose toward such pretenders as Marc Connelly, Philip Barry, George Kelly, Maxwell Anderson, Sam Shipman, George Kaufman and Eugene O'Neill.

For here was Owen Davis, the millionaire dean of them all, the stage-scribe who is as definitely non-Broadway as Lou Holtz, presenting his latest chore in writing, staging and casting. I wished fervently to hail another possible Owen Davis great play, "Coming Spring," but—

* * *

Balm for the smarting wounds was the oil—the good old oil—of fine playwrighting, precise direction, almost perfect casting, and a beautiful production. Mr. Davis could have fooled me—and maybe you—so easily. But the story was the story of grandmother (she was the boss of the house like Mary Morris in "Double Door"), and grandmother's money, the weakling grandson and his wholly unsatisfied bride; the girl in the Main Street store who gets in trouble with the help of the dastardly grandson, the 'family help' (Elizabeth Patterson) who scores with every speech, and a general shrewdly designed—too shrewdly designed, in this opinion—pattern of a play with New England gargoyles as characters which won't, in this opinion, get much of any place.

I do not say that Mr. Davis hasn't caught the idiom of the play's locale, Bucksport, and, for that matter, Ellsworth, Maine. I do say that the background has been used maybe a town or two away by him more happily in the past and that the subject of money in the family and miscast love in a grim down-East household is not worthy of his challenge.

* * *

I think that the best performance and the best part in the play was that of Owen Davis, Jr., and that of Wesley Levenseller. Miss Patterson, who has no peer [illegible] on the stage, was great in a part turned out of a mold which I think should be broken up and never resoldered. Francesca Bruning and Richard Whorf were two of a dozen actors who were all excellent.

* * *

If every other reviewer in town raises his or her hat toward the stratosphere in acclaim for "Coming Spring," I shall be very happy. I wish even they would blue-pencil my picture out of this story then, maybe, any of my feminine followers might skip this thesis. That's how completely I hope "Coming Spring" becomes another proof that I don't know my onions.

Koussevitzky Returns for Orchestra's 54th Season

The coming musical season holds promise of being the most brilliant in recent years with concert stages in Boston presenting some of the world's most famous virtuosos during the next few months.

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky returns for his 11th consecutive year as director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 54th season at Symphony Hall on October 12.

Among the special features of the season's programs will be the increase in the repertoire of operatic music. The second act of Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde," including the great love scene; the "[illegible] of Siegfried," and for Holy Week Bach's great "Passion According to St. John" are among such selections to be played.

For the operatic programs Elsa Alsen, Paul Althouse, Olga Averino, Gertrude Kappel, Beata Malkin and Marguerite Matzenauer have been engaged, and among the instrumental soloists to be heard are the pianists, Myra Hess and Walter Gieseking; the violinists Jascha Heifetz and Albert Spalding, the violoncellist Gregor Piatigorsky, and the composer-pianist, Filip Lazar, in a new work of his own.

There will be the usual double series of 24 Friday afternoon and Saturday evening performances.

Adolphe Menjou Excited Over Offer to Play Lead in 'The Lady Lies' Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 18—Carole Lombard, who went to New York for rest and a vacation, will be home sooner than any one expected. Carole is wanted at MGM for the lead in "Repeal," which goes into production in another 10 days. It is her very first time on the MGM lot and I am told that this is a role which is particularly suited to her.

Louella O. Parsons

Jack Conway, who is to direct "Repeal" and who always had faith in the picture even when it seemed as if it would never be made, is testing Richard Arlen for the lead opposite Carole. If Dick accepts this role it will also be his first on the MGM lot.

* * *

You cannot blame Adolphe Menjou for being all excited over Erich Pommer's offer to him to play the lead in 'The Lady Lies' for Fox. Once Pommer gets adjusted and forgets those last hideous months he spent in Germany you will see him come through with something big. He is a great producer and all he needs is a chance. Joseph May, one of Pommer's personal directors at UFA, will direct Menjou in "The Lady Lies" and that makes me wonder if Fox won't change the title. Paramount used it some time ago.

* * *

What could be more appropriate, I ask you, than to have that debonair Frenchman, Maurice Chevalier, star in the "Folies Bergere de Paris." Nobody in all the wide world can sing those French songs with the air of this Frenchman. When the request was put squarely up to Darryl Zanuck, he cabled Chevalier who agreed to lend his presence to the Folies as soon as he returns to Hollywood. That means that "The Red Cat," the musical intended for him originally, has been postponed . . . I understand indefinitely postponed.

* * *

We have heard so much about the book, "The President Vanishes," by an anonymous author, that we hail with interest the news that it will be on the bookstands in October. Then we can see for ourselves just how smart a move it is for Walter Wanger to borrow Lewis Stone from Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer. Whether or not we believe that he resembles the character in the book, we know that Stone is a good actor and that any role entrusted to him assumes dignity and importance. With Peggy Conklin, the femme lead here, the first Wanger production should get under way before many weeks.

Telephones hot and heavy from Universal over the Benedict Arnold story which came from their own studio. Oh for the life of a social butterfly on a day when every telephone call is a wail! Jesse L. Lasky, while Carl Laemmle, Jr., was making up his mind, had Philip Dunne write an original story on Benedict Arnold. Lasky plans to make it very shortly and since his yarn also places the blame for Arnold's treachery on Peggy Shippen, the woman . . . Well, there's nothing left for Universal to do but to bow out.

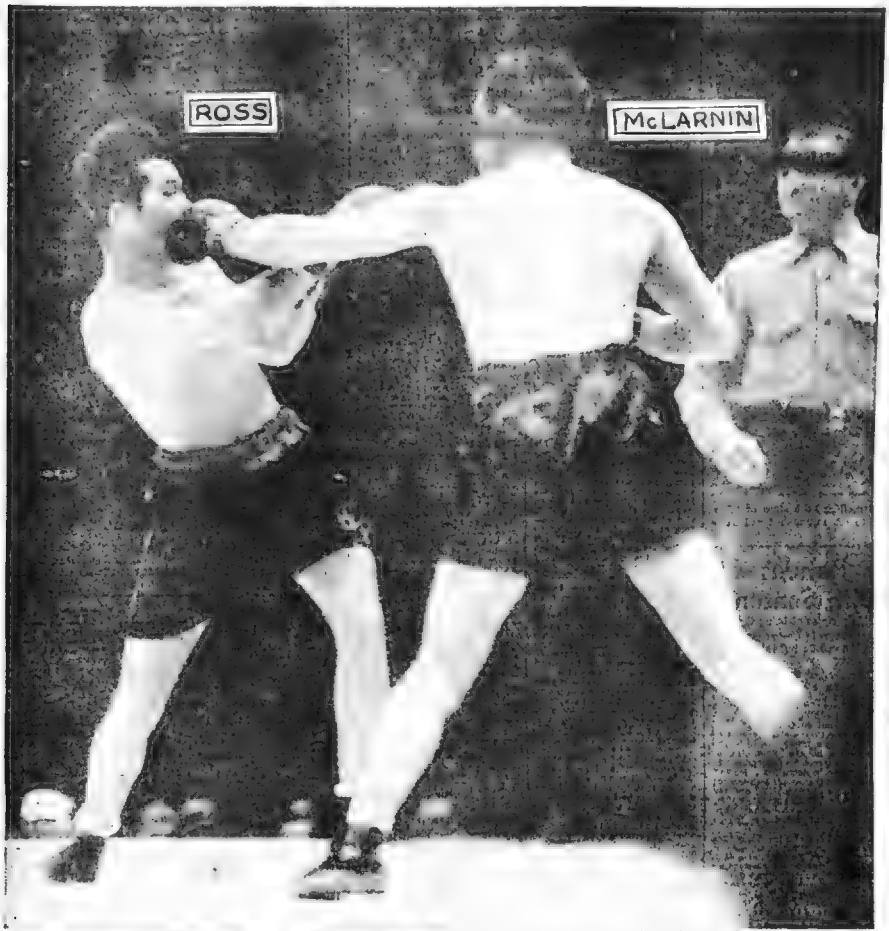
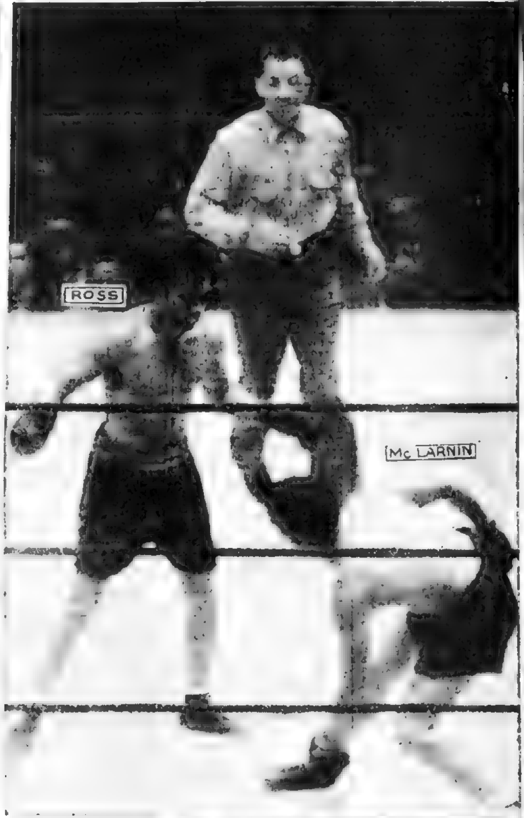
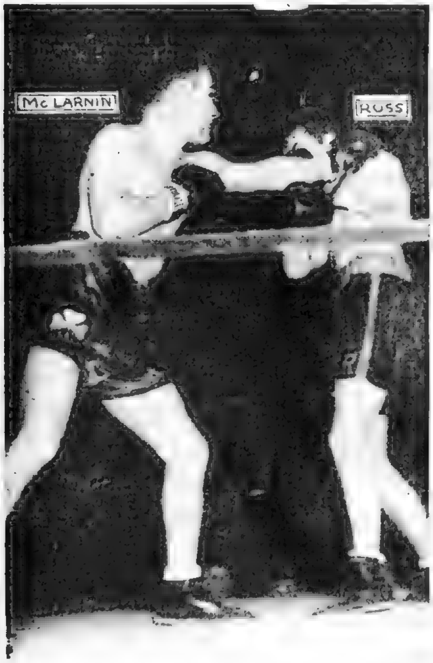
McLARNIN TRADES SOCKS FOR OLD CROWN AS WELTER KING



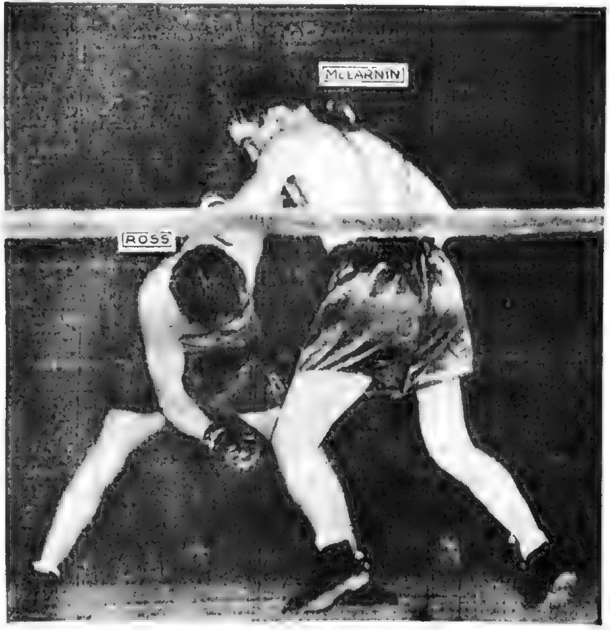
You can't beat a good left, and here's Jimmy McLarnin depending on his lethal left to pile up points in the eighth round of his winning fight with Barney Ross for the welterweight throne. McLarnin used a straight left much of the time and varied with a hook. He won on a split decision in the N. Y. go. Fighting was close in every round.



Jimmy McLarnin was a very weary young man in that 15th round last night in New York's Garden Bowl. Here he's shown as he slips to one knee in the final session, while Ross stands ready to follow up any advantage. Barney knew every point was counting then, and battled desperately. Arthur Donovan refereed the big glove trading conflict.



The third round was a very good session for Jim McLarnin. He only hit Ross' shoulder on this left jab, but plenty of his other socks scored. Ross was weakened by McLarnin's early attack, but came back in the latter stages of the go. So close was the bout, that every round's scoring was open to debate. Maybe they'll meet again, and settle the debate, once and for all. Ross won recently, and McLarnin tied the score last night.



Champion Barney Ross crouches almost to the canvas as he shoots a long left over Jimmy McLarnin's shoulder as the bout draws to a close. Ross' boxing was good all the way, but McLarnin was just a shade better, as this scene shows. He made Barney miss many blows and rode with others to keep his foe's tally down. The bout was very close, however, and many of the customers groaned aloud at the outcome.

McLARNIN
ROSS

Here's the start of the title muss, with Champion Ross crouched, seeking an opening in Challenger McLarnin's defense. The boys came out of their corners fighting, and gave the fans a run for their money from then until the final gong. It was a brisk affair, and no doubt they'll try it all over again in the near future.

LONG, LONG AGO, WHEN YOU AND I wore pinafores, Maggie they used to call Connie Mack "the man in the hard hat," due to his love for a black derby. Just as now they speak of Edward T. Collins, Connie's old baseball foster son and present skipper of the Red Sox, as "the man in the Norfolk jacket," owing to Eddie's fondness for pinch-back clothes.

Austen Lake

So today—because today has a particular significance—the Man in the Norfolk Jacket looked back through the years to the Man in the Hard Hat and the rough and tumble stage of his youth.

"It was 28 years ago today," said Eddie, a trifle wistfully, "that I played my first major league game . . . in Chicago against the White Sox . . . Ed Walsh was pitching for them, and Rube Waddell for us . . . I gotta hit the first time up."

Twenty-eight years and never, he says, a boresome moment. Surely a record for long distance enthusiasm. Because now, in his little pent-house box above the playing field, Collins, verging fifty, suffers the same stomach shivers and inner nervous tantrums while watching his game, as he did in his junior days. Each afternoon still a separate adventure.

"I'd like to do it all over again," said Eddie.

Class! You senior students of living, raise your hands. Looking backward over your shoulders, how many of you, graying children, can say, "I too, would like to do it all over again?"

"WHAT IS THE MOST DIFFICULT SPORT to learn?" asks H. C. J. of Roxbury.

I would say baseball and hockey among the team games. Golf and tennis as individual games. These are longest and most difficult in which to attain top-flight perfection. No major league baseball or hockey player ever reached the heights who did not learn his first principles as a wee, small lad. It takes ten years, on the average, to make a Grade A player in these sports.

Most precise game—golf. Fastest game—hockey. Easiest to learn—football and wrestling. Most wearing—boxing, tennis and handball. Goofiest—marathoning. Most healthful—swimming. Most fun—thinking how good you were when your bones becomes too brittle to play.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS, AT Braves Field today to fan their feeble pennant flame, are NOT one big happy family. Indeed, there are little feuds smouldering and kept smothered only by the fact that the club still has a small chance of winning.

The players feel that they, instead of the Giants, should be splitting the coming World Series purse—that the opportunity was muffed.

A few grumble about the Deans, Dizzy and Paul, blaming their "strike" for bumping them out of the big money.

"If the goofies hadn't spilled over, we'd be up there now," said one of them.

This is a queer attitude, considering that the Deans, eccentric as they may be, have won, between them, 45 games—more than half of the Cardinal victories. Without them the Cards would be a second division club, and the Giants, by this time, would have had the pennant neatly wrapped with candy box ribbon and delivered at the tradesman's entrance.

DESCRIPTION OF TITLE GO ROUND BY ROUND

By Sid Mercer
By Universal Service

New York, Sept. 17—Here is the way Barney Ross, champion, and challenger Jimmy McLarnin went through their paces in the welterweight championship fight here last night.

ROUND ONE

The bell rang and the fighters came out to midring circling each other. McLarnin landed the first stiff punch to the nose. He repeated twice. Ross clipped Jimmy with right to body and left to head. McLarnin landed a left to the head. McLarnin drove a hard left to the body. McLarnin rushed and pounded to the body with both hands. Ross landed stiff right to head. McLarnin swapped left hook to body for jab that caught him on face. Ross hammered McLarnin in body. Ross landed a hard left to head and Jimmy came back with terrific left to head. McLarnin drove left to body. They were fighting at the bell. ROUND EVEN.

ROUND TWO

McLarnin poked three times to face with stiff lefts. Jimmy stepped in with a hook to the face. They boxed carefully. McLarnin was staggered by Ross with terrific rights to the jaw. The crowd roared as the boys slugged in midring. McLarnin shot two hard lefts to the stomach. Ross smashed back with two heavy rights to the head followed by a left hook. Ross cut loose with a terrific rally and McLarnin met him punch for punch. McLarnin missed with a left hook to head and Ross drove right that landed on the shoulders. They were clubbing each other at the bell. CLOSE ROUND.

ROUND THREE

They started slowly, with McLarnin jabbing to face and then slipping a heavy right under Barney's heart. McLarnin crossed Ross with a heavy right to the head and then sunk a terrific left to the mid-section. Ross was bleeding from the mouth. McLarnin drove another hard left to the stomach. Ross took the offensive again. McLarnin shot a fast left and right to the face. Ross drove two heavy lefts to the mouth. McLarnin caught Ross with a right to the mouth. It turned into a jabbing match and McLarnin was putting in more power on his lefts. Jimmy smashed with both hands to Barney's body. McLarnin outhelted Ross in a furious rally at the bell. McLARNIN'S ROUND.

ROUND FOUR

ROUND FIVE

McLarnin shot eight lefts to the face. Ross clipped a sharp left hook to the head and McLarnin retorted with a heavy right to the heart and then caught Ross with a stiff right to the face. McLarnin landed a punch on fair territory on Ross and the referee stopped to caution that he considered the punch low. Ross pressed McLarnin in but he ran into a heavy head fire. McLarnin landed stiff left against the swollen optic of Ross. They swapped left hooks. McLarnin clubbed Ross to the body and Ross drove Jimmy away with two terrific left hooks to the head. They were sparring at the bell. ROSS' ROUND ON LOW BLOW.

ROUND SIX

McLarnin walked to midring and Ross came out on the run. Barney pranced into Jimmy and was clipped six times to the face by lefts and rights without a return. McLarnin hooked a left to the body and Barney cut loose with a left and right to Jimmy's head. Ross rushed McLarnin to the ropes. McLarnin hurt Ross with a left

Donovan Assailed in Bitter Attack by Ross' Pilot

By MAX KASE
(Boston American Staff Correspondent)

New York, Sept. 18—With Jimmy McLarnin back on the world's welterweight championship throne today as a result of his victory over Barney Ross in a sizzling 15-round bout at the Garden Bowl, fight fans debated the merits of the decision.

Thousands declared McLarnin was entitled to the decision, while other thousands were bitter in their denunciation of the verdict which stripped Ross of his championship.

McLarnin won on a split decision. Judge Charley Lynch voted for Ross. He gave Barney eight rounds, McLarnin six and called one session even.

Judge Tommy Shortell declared McLarnin won six rounds, Ross five and that four were even.

Referee Arthur Donovan cast the deciding vote when he ruled in favor of McLarnin. He voted for McLarnin in ten rounds, and for Ross in five.

More than $100,000 changed hands as a result of the decision. There was more money wagered on the contest than was risked on the Baer-Carnera mill.

WINCH ASSAILS DONOVAN

The fact many of the wagers were large ones has added to the protest against the decision.

Art Winch, Ross' manager, made a bitter attack on Referee Arthur Donovan.

"McLarnin had an Irisher as a referee," he declared. "No wonder we lost."

Ross was more calm than his manager. He insisted he won, but failed to make any charges against any of the officials.

McLarnin was just as insistent that he had the better of the tussle.

When Ross and McLarnin met earlier in the summer, the decision went to Barney on a split vote. At that time Referee Harry Forbes voted for Ross after the judges had disagreed.

Sports writers were evenly divided as to the merits of the decision. As many insisted McLarnin won as there were who strung along with Ross.

The popular decision of the experts was that a draw would have been the better verdict.

CHICAGO BID FOR BOUT

McLarnin and Ross will probably fight it out again in Chicago. The Chicago Stadium made McLarnin an offer of 40 per cent of the gate to meet Ross in a title defense match in the Windy City.

Chicago is Ross' home town while McLarnin has engaged in some of his greatest battles in the Windy City.

One round during the fight—the fifth which was Jimmy's by a comfortable margin—was taken away from McLarnin when he accidently hit low.

It was that close, my friends, with your envoy, who had expected to see McLarnin win in decisive fashion, scoring the fight for Ross. He credited the black-haired Chicagoan with eight rounds, five for McLarnin and two even.

It was a battle of contradictions, entirely out of line with the pre-fight views of the experts.

It was Ross, the boxer, who proved the slugger; McLarnin, the slugger, who was the boxer.

McLARNIN GIVES WAY

But to this agent, Ross won on aggressiveness and on more effective punching. He surprised the 30,000 pew occupants with his superb daring and reckless charging. In all of their furious toe to toe exchanges it was McLarnin who felt the weight of the trading and who broke ground to terminate the swaps.

But it was McLarnin's great left hand—great last night—which piled up for him valuable points and which undoubtedly swung the sentiment of Shortell and Donovan to his favor.

There were no knockdowns although both fighters were staggered during the battle.

McAuliffe Boys Horsemen True--Narcotics Banned by N. H. Commission

By Dave Egan

Salem, N. H., Sept. 18—A thing that gladdens the heart of those who love hosses is a family like the McAuliffes.

There are two of them, Dan and Jack, and they combine to own and train horses. Their special pet was Plumage, which they never called anything but "Old Mum," and the brothers are al[illegible] ness at the first opportunity.

Dan is a smallish gentleman who won 21 consecutive professional boxing bouts. Tom Gibbons, before his bout with Jack Dempsey in Shelby, stamped the little man as one of the greatest flyweight prospects he had ever seen.

But Dan's proved to be an even greater jockey than he was a fighter. He quit the ring undefeated to become an outstanding jockey. He rode Gallant Fox in the Belmont Futurity for a purse of $120,000, the richest stake ever offered in this country.

DECRY USE OF NARCOTICS

The undefeated Dice, too, was one of his pet mounts, and Danny rode him in every race the hoss ran until the horse broke a blood vessel.

Plumage, though, is their particular pride and joy. Last year she won only one in 36 starts, but when the McAuliffe boys took her over she started to show real form, winning eight times this year and finishing second nine times.

Then J. L. Roberts claimed their "Ole Mum," and she was promptly beaten. But you may safely lay a small wager that she will be back in the McAuliffe stables, for she will be claimed back at the first opportunity.

Like all true horsemen, the McAuliffe brothers decry the use of narcotics. They state that strychnine may be used as a tonic in order to loosen up the tissues of the horse and promote an appetite, but they heartily disapprove of stimu[lat]ing a horse in order to score a victory.

The New Hampshire racing commission, too, stamped on the practice when it issued the following statement.

"No narcotic or cafein shall be used in any manner and no electrical, mechanical or other appliance other than the ordinary whip and spur shall be used for the purpose of stimulating the horse or affecting his speed in a race. Any person so offending may be suspended or ruled off at the discretion of the New Hampshire racing commission after giving consideration to a report or recommendation by the stewards of the meeting.

If any person shall administer any drug, stimulant or tonic in any manner, other than as a tonic for medicinal purposes only, every persons so offending may be suspended or ruled off at the discretion of the N. H. racing commission after giving consideration to a report or recommendation by the stewards of the meeting.

MAY TEST WINNERS

Any person who is administering a recognized tonic to a horse in training for medicinal purposes, shall, when the horse is entered for a race, notify the stewards exactly what tonic the horse has received.

In addition, a test may be made at any time of the winner of a race, this race to be determined prior to the opening of the day's program by means of numbered balls rolled from a leather bottle. This selection shall be made by the chief inspector and the judge at large for the commission. The identity of such a race shall be kept secret until the race has been run.

Champ Yet to Keep Title There

By Sam Cohen

New York, Sept. 17. There was a peculiar yet familiar odor over Long Island Bowl today. Another decision that will wrangle on a third match gave Jimmy McLarnin back the world welterweight championship in his bout with Barney Ross, who lifted the title from McLarnin three months ago.

That grizzled jinx that has [illegible] the destruction of [illegible] to [illegible] a champion [illegible] retain his title in this arena.

When and [illegible] McLarnin didn't seem to believe [illegible] when Humphries gave him the victory nod.

McLarnin and Ross have been posing together so often because of the postponements that they seemed like first cousins when they came into the ring.

[illegible] went [illegible] 21 [illegible]

Ross went on parade in the second round and had McLarnin rolling around on his heels. He almost spoiled it all in excitement, missing his target repeatedly in the closing seconds of the round.

The Chicago grocery boy turned butcher in the ninth. Doc Bagley, in the corner for McLarnin, did a great job saving McLarnin's left eye from closing completely. Bagley lost the decision, however. The eye shut tight in the 13th.

Al Zappala of Lawrence, former Bay State amateur boxing champion, looked good belting his way to a decision over Frank Le Bianco, of Brooklyn, in a four round bout.

Les Patrick, boss of the New York Rangers hockey club, was in a ringside seat, but seemed more concerned over the report that Boston and Chicago would drop out of the National Hockey League and practically wreck it.

Jack Kenney's circulation department of the Boston Evening American carried a banner down front with "Fifki" Bornstein and Harry Cohen rooting for—do I have to say whom?

Joe Jacobs walked over to [tell] us that Schmeling will sail for the U. S. shortly in quest of a [illegible] match with Max Baer, w[orld] heavyweight champion.

From Every Angle It's the AMERICAN-ADVERTISER For RENTAL ADS

"You know how smart we've thought ourselves every time we've moved, Don! But Alice certainly taught me a few things this evening. You saw her new home—didn't you think it was darling? And how do you think she found it? None of this old idea of going up one street and down another looking for signs the way we have done — no sir, not for Alice!"

"Know how she found it, Don? Well, naturally, Alice, like all the rest of us, had only a vague idea of what she wanted. So she looked through the rental ads of the American and Advertiser, checked those that appealed to her, and then went to see Barbara Holmes, in the Free Rental Bureau on the fourth floor of R. H. White's.

Well, Barbara Holmes told her everything she wanted to know about these places — price, location, surroundings, transportation, the layout of the rooms — anything and everything she wanted to know, besides showing her pictures of the apartment. Alice cut her list to two and then chose the first she visited. That charming spot we just left is the answer. Nifty, what? Me for that system next time we move!"

CHALLENGER 15 SECONDS AHEAD AT THE TURN

lenger around the mark at the end of the broad reach 56 minutes and 28 seconds after the start, only six [illegible] over the cup record for a 10-mile leg set in 1893 by Vigilant.

Her margin might have been even more had her reaching jib not gotten away from the crew as they doused it just before reaching the mark and trailed in the water for several minutes before it finally was pulled inboard.

The Endeavour's time at the mark was 11 36 35 a. m. and Rainbow 11 36 50.

Endeavour was striving for her second straight victory, a record achieved by only one other of the 15 challengers in the 83-year history of the cup races, the late Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV in 1920. Shamrock then lost the next three races to the American defender Resolute.

RAINBOW TAKES LEAD

Vanderbilt sent his white-hulled defender boiling across the starting line in the weather berth and with a five second advantage for the first 10 mile leg of the 30 mile triangular course but did not hold his lead long.

Sopwith worked Endeavour through Rainbow's lee and had a lead of a few yards at noon.

The first leg of the course was a broad reach, the second a beat and the third a close reach.

At 12.24 p. m., 44 minutes after the start Endeavour held the slight advantage she gained soon after crossing the line.

Sopwith decided to douse his reaching jib at that point and a mess resulted, the challenger's crew letting the big sail get away from them. It trailed in the water.

HOLDS HER LEAD

It was several minutes before they could get it inboard and her decks cleared. Finally a quadrilateral jib was set in its place.

Vanderbilt also doused his reaching jib soon after it almost got away from the hands, but they finally pulled it in. They then set a quadrilateral.

Endeavour took the windward berth, the favored position as they rounded the mark and started the 10-mile beat.

Both went on the port tack as they cleared the mark, made a short hitch to starboard, then went back on the port tack again.

Endeavour had worked well up to weather of Rainbow at 1 o'clock and maintained her short lead over the defender.

The breeze was moderating at 1.30 as the two boats continued along the 10-mile beat to the second mark, with Endeavour holding about the same advantage she had at the end of 10 miles, 15 seconds.

QUARTER-MILE LEAD

Rainbow, however, has been considered the better boat to windward and if Endeavour could hold her safe until they turn for home, where the wind will be off the port quarter, the British boat would have much the advantage.

Endeavour came about on the starboard tack at 1.38, followed by Rainbow to give the first definite line on their relative positions. The maneuver showed the British challenger to have at least a quarter of a mile lead and it looked like a hopeless task for Rainbow.

They had held on the port tack for 40 minutes without touching their canvas but with Endeavour pointing much higher into the wind and going along better than Rainbow.

The start was made at 11.40 a. m. (Boston time).

Vanderbilt, at the helm of the defender, sent her boiling across the starting line in the windward berth some five seconds ahead of Sopwith and his Endeavour.

A tear was showing in the challenger's jib.

The committee boat hoisted the course signals at 11.15 a. m., setting a 30-mile triangular course with the first 10 miles a board reach, the second a beat and the last a close reach.

The directions of the course are south by west on the first leg, northwest on the second and east northeast a half east on the third.

The breeze had freshened to an estimated nine to ten knots 20 minutes before starting time.

As Endeavour and Rainbow jockeyed behind the line awaiting the starting signal, the Nourmahal with President Roosevelt aboard came by, dipping her colors to the British yacht as she passed.

Soon after they crossed the line another tear appeared in the jib just above the first but Sopwith held to his course, gambling on the sail holding until they could get settled down to racing.

The tear was not at the point of greatest strain and is no particular handicap unless it should spread.

BETTERS HIS POSITION

Both yachts had good way on as they crossed the line, but the challenger was well under Rainbow's lee.

Soon after the start, however, Sopwith appeared to be bettering his position, working the big blue-hulled Endeavour through the defender's lee.

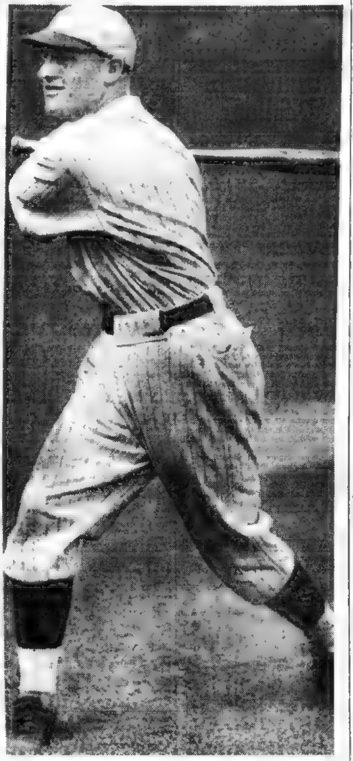
Sopwith sent up a quadrilateral jib in stops, ready to break it out if his torn jib should give way entirely.

Both skippers started with a double head rig. Vanderbilt soon doused his staysail, then thought better of it and set it again a few minutes later.

ON EVEN TERMS

Twenty minutes after the start the boats were practically on even terms, with Endeavour possibly a few yards in the lead, but not enough to do her much good.

Switching Cards Up in N. L.



Jack Rothrock, former Red Sox infielder, has become a star outfielder with the second place Cardinals, who were to open a vital series with the Braves today in the Wigwam. Rothrock is one of three great switch hitters of the Cards. Experts used to claim shift hitters were no use, but Rothrock, Manager Frank Frisch and First Baseman Jim Collins all bat left and right. Each plays a big part in the Cards' desperate drive to overtake the Giants in the N. L. race. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

What Fighters Say--

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 18. Here's what the two principals in last night's welterweight championship fight had to say today as they looked upon their efforts in retrospect:

JIMMY McLARNIN:

"My goodness, that Ross is a tough boy, isn't he? He can certainly stand up under a punch. I was in a lot better condition for this fight than I was for the first one. And I think I was boxing a great deal better, too. He wasn't nearly so hard to time this fight as he was in the first one. No, I don't mind my black eye. Getting that little title back takes the string out of everything."

BARNEY ROSS:

"If I lost I couldn't have lost to a greater fighter. Mind you, I said, "if I lost." I thought I made this fight and I don't think anyone can say he ever made me take a backward step. I knew he never hurt me at any time. I thought I had him pretty far gone in the fourteenth and fifteenth.

"But I'm not kicking. He's a great fighter and the public is the final judge of decisions, after all."

TEAM A BACKS AT HARVARD ALL SET

Although Harvard's 1934 grid season is only three days old, Eddie Casey's plans appear fairly well formulated. The [illegible] of the [illegible] from 110 to 48, enabled the Crimson coach to clear out all the deadwood and most of the players marked doubtful.

Today Casey is able to field four full teams, though there will be considerable shifting before any permanent arrangement is reached.

There is little likelihood of change in the Team A backfield before the first game with Bates now only two and a half weeks distant. The [illegible] Haley, at quarterback, Chet Litman at left halfback, the all-important [illegible] halfback and Donald Jackson at full back.

Litman and Haley represent Harvard's veteran backfield material. Both were regulars a year ago, Litman playing right-halfback. Casey, however, plans to shift him to the Number 3 back position to alternate with Fergy Locke.

He will go South, shortly after Christmas, to a Florida watering resort. To do what? Why, if you please, to row a boat.

His Red Sox bosses, on advice of Connie Mack, are planning to have Grove tug on an oar to strengthen his thews and sinews. Florida and the winter sun—it's a type of medical treatment that anybody, you or I, could swallow without a wry face.

ENDEAVOUR WINS!

I AM NOT "INSULAR"—the word belongs to my friend, George Carens of the Transcript—enough to fall down on the knuckles of my knees and pray, "Dear God, please save the America's Cup for the New York Yacht Club."

I even own to a sneaking wish that Tom Sopwith, who seems a jolly, deserving sort, will lift the garish, ugly mug and carry it off. If this be heresy . . .

One recalls when the British successfully defended the Davis Tennis Cup last month, Helen Wills, in her syndicated articles, wrote a sweet, motherly remark: "We must become reconciled to the bitterness of losing such a cherished trophy." Yes, Helen, we must! Thanks for stiffening our morale.

In these searching times, what with social upheavals, marine disasters, the clouds of war, we are prone to lose our proper sense of proportion. Thanks again, dear Helen.

UNACCUSTOMED AS THEY ARE TO RAIN, the college football teams have been holding indoor practices during the late wet spell.

It's decadence, that's what it is!

Why I remember the time (Who threw that!) when football coaches used to douse the ball in a bucket of water during dry spells, to give the lads a taste of carrying the slippery leather.

Wet weather practice, with the boys soaked through their heavy armor and smeared with chocolate mud, was part of the fall curriculum. Weren't we the hairy-chesties!

EDDIE SHORE, HUMAN CYCLONE OF HOCKEY, has enquired discreetly about the intentions of the Bruins, whether they are going to operate. He has heard rumors, up in the grain fields of Western Canada. Last year, at this time, Eddie was dodging the Bruins' attempt to lasso him, maintaining a stiff and sullen silence. Times change.

Round Description of Title Battle

ROUND SEVEN

ROUND NINE

ROUND TEN

They stood in center of the ring and [illegible] at each other's faces. McLarnin made Ross miss with a left and clubbed a short left hook to the face. McLarnin slipped a left to the face and Ross finally [illegible] with a right for the first time that landed on the head and he [illegible] Jimmy up. They landed three lefts to the face and then swapped rights to the jaw. Ross was pressing the fight but he was being outpunched. McLarnin had regained control of the situation through most of the round and outscored Ross in another wild head [illegible]. McLarnin was outjabbing Ross at the bell. McLARNIN'S ROUND.

ROUND ELEVEN

They came out slowly and McLarnin jabbed five times to the face without a return. Ross sent two strong hooks to the body. McLarnin landed two short left hooks to the head. Ross attempted to rally but McLarnin slipped under his [illegible] and came out to knock out Ross' mouthpiece with a left to the mouth. Ross clipped McLarnin with a beautiful [illegible] Ross landed a hard left to [illegible] McLarnin's [illegible] Barney's eye [illegible]. They were clubbing each other to the head with lefts and then McLarnin [illegible] with a left and right to the head. McLARNIN'S ROUND.

ROUND TWELVE

They came to midring and McLarnin's left lashed out again in lightning thrusts at Barney's face [illegible] it against Ross' head without a return. Barney finally landed a heavy left hook to the body. Ross landed a terrific right [illegible] could not see the fight and Ross [illegible] to score almost at will. Ross jabbed out a stiff jab to McLarnin's face. Jimmy shot a left hook to Barney's jaw. They came to close quarters and belted each other. They were clubbing each other to the head at the bell. ROSS' ROUND.

ROUND THIRTEEN

McLarnin's left began shooting at the start with Ross' mouth as his target. He kept Ross away for half a minute and then Barney tore [illegible] with a right up Jimmy's head. Both [illegible] as they [illegible] in a clinch. McLarnin opened a cut over Ross' right eye with a vicious left hook and blood began to trickle. McLarnin shot fast with his left [illegible] of Barney's punches and he leaped in with a looping left to the head. Barney came back fighting furiously and they were swapping blow for blow at the bell. ROUND EVEN.

ROUND FOURTEEN

The crowd shouted encouragement to both boys. McLarnin shot 2 lefts to the face and a short right before Barney charged. Jimmy weaved under his punches and locked him up in a clinch. McLarnin resumed his lefts [illegible] to the face. Barney missed a left to the face. McLarnin shot a left to the body and Donovan looked and said nothing. Ross landed a right and left to the body. Ross rushed Jimmy with both hands flying and McLarnin answered the challenge in a rally that was fairly even. They were clawing at each other like a couple of tigers. Ross landed a terrific left to the body but McLarnin stepped away and shot two lefts to the mouth. Ross drove through McLarnin's punches and smashed with both hands to Jimmy's body. McLarnin shot two lefts to the mouth at the bell. ROSS' ROUND.

ROUND FIFTEEN

They came to center of the ring and touched both gloves. McLarnin snapped his left into Barney's face and repeated twice more. Ross rushed and McLarnin blocked him. Ross drove a right over McLarnin's left that almost knocked McLarnin off balance. McLarnin was caught with a left hook to the jaw and slipped to his knees. Ross shook his hands for an apology. McLarnin was very tired and the crowd roared for Ross to finish him. Jimmy astonished the spectators by standing close and hammering punch for punch. McLarnin landed on Ross' head with two left hooks and they were standing in center of the ring pummeling each other with both hands in a long rally. McLarnin landed a left and right to the face that shook Barney's knees. IT WAS AN EVEN ROUND AND McLARNIN WINS DECISION.

One round—the fifth—was taken from McLarnin for hitting low.

THE OFFICIAL SCORING

Lynch ruled eight for Ross, six for McLarnin and one even. He said that he would have ruled the fifth for McLarnin if he had not hit the foul punch which would have made his score seven all and one even.

Shortell [illegible] for McLarnin, five for Ross and four even. Donovan saw no even round but gave McLarnin ten and Ross five.

Lynch—
R R M M M R M E R R M M R M R
Shortell—
E M M R R M E R R M E R M M E
Donovan—
M R M M R M M M R M M R M M R
Kase—
R R M M M E R R R M E R M R R

Only in the third, fifth, sixth, ninth, 10, 12, and 13 were the officials able to agree on either Ross or McLarnin. In the other eight rounds they disagreed and widely.

Gruelling is the word to use in describing the battle. It was a vicious give and take affair. The furious duel left its mark.

McLarnin's left eye was closed in the 11th rounnd, and from that time on he could not sight Barney's right. The Chicagoan did plenty of damage with that member from that round on, rocking Jimmy time and again.

DANISH STAR IN B. A. A. GAMES

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 18—Henry Nielsen, Danish distance runner who recently broke Paavo Nurmi's world record for 3000 meters, will run in four indoor track meets in this country next February.

Nielsen, who bounded into the headlines when he ran the 3000 meters—in 8 18.3, compared with Nurmi's record of 8 20.4, and defeated Jan Kusockinski, Poland's Olympic 10,000-meter king, will run in the Millrose, New York A. C. and National A. A. U. championship meets in New York and the Boston A. A. games.

ACE TOURNEY ENDS TODAY

By Sully Kozol

It's all over today!

AT 5 P. M. THE THIRD ANNUAL BOSTON AMERICAN HOLE-IN-ONE TOURNAMENT WILL HAVE BEEN DECLARED OFFICIALLY CLOSED. WATCH THE SPORT PAGES OF THE AMERICAN TOMORROW FOR ANNOUNCEMENTS OF THE WINNERS.

For 12 days now, the Hole-in-One Contest has been in progress. Hundreds of entrants have tried daily to accomplish the feat, but none has been successful.

Statistics show that only one out of every 30 entrants gets within the 20-foot circle surrounding the cup.

On this basis, Technology mathematicians compute that the chances of a contestant sinking one into the cup are about one in [illegible].

Nevertheless, an entrant did it last year and it may be done again today.

There are no age, sex or residential restrictions in the American's Hole-in-One Contest. The youngest entrant was Danny McGonagle, aged 12, of Rossmore road, Jamaica Plain. "Pop" Bliss, 75-year-old president and founder of the Franklin Park Golf Club, is the oldest entrant to date.

Don't forget to look for the names of winners of the Hole-in-One tournament in the sport pages of the American tomorrow.

DONOVAN IS HIT AS REFEREE BY BAER

New York, Sept. 18—Arthur Donovan, referee of the Ross-McLarnin bout who cast the ballot that stripped Barney of his title, [illegible] in the ring in the Baer-Carnera, Baer-Schmeling, Sharkey-Carnera and Sharkey-Walker bouts.

Baer protested against Donovan [illegible] bout with Carnera, and later charged the referee with interfering with him during the bout.

Donovan voted for Walker the night the latter received a draw with Sharkey.

Donovan is considered the "ace" referee of the New York Athletic Commission. He was originally connected with the athletic department of the New York A. C.

The late William Muldoon, former czar of the New York Athletic Commission, sponsored Donovan.

Donovan is Irish-American and has always been considered a fair official.

In the first Ross-McLarnin bout, Tom O'Rourke, one of the judges, voted for McLarnin. It was later charged by the Ross supporters that O'Rourke was prejudiced in favor of Jimmy on account of their Celtic blood.

The success of the two McLarnin-Ross bouts was due to the racial [illegible] between the supporters of the two boxers.

McLarnin had knocked out Al Singer, Ruby Goldstein, Benny Leonard and a long array of other Jewish boxers up to the time he was beaten by Ross in their first bout.

Ringside seats for each bout brought $25 each from speculators as a result of the desire of the Ross rooters to see McLarnin licked.

Those persons who wagered on Ross were open in their criticism of the commission when they found out Donovan was going to referee.

Fate decreed that Donovan should have the deciding vote.

Charley Lynch, the lone official [illegible] for Ross, like Donovan, is Irish-American.

Cardinals Sign Trojans' Grid Star

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional Football League, have signed Homer Griffith, former Southern California backfield star.

Three players, Marvin Hansen, a quarterback; Chris Mathis, halfback, and George Purvis, lineman, were sold to the St. Louis club of the American Association.

EVER WONDER WHY THERE'S NO CROFT BEER?

One thing that makes ale different from beer is the kind of yeast used. And it's impossible to bring these two kinds into the same brewery without trouble. They'll "cross" in spite of all you can do to prevent it — and that spoils both kinds. I've been brewing ale for forty years, and I'm proud of the product that bears my name today. I wouldn't dare risk spoiling it (and the beer, too) by trying to brew both — so we stick to Croft Ale, and hope you continue to enjoy it as much as you do now.

LOAN FIGURES SHOW MARKET CONDITION

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The weekly condition [illegible] of reporting member banks of the Federal [illegible] interest [illegible] change [illegible] the [illegible] commercial [illegible] loans [illegible] to [illegible] modern [illegible] pattern [illegible] better [illegible] weeks. From a [illegible] angle, however, the interesting feature of the report is the [illegible] ears [illegible] Sept [illegible] from the previous week. But more important is the decrease of $611,000,000 from the like 1933 week. From this it would seem that the stock market is a well liquidated affair. Especially since average prices are at about the same levels ruling a year ago. [illegible] securities [illegible] banks are [illegible] thirty [illegible] after a [illegible] of sidewise price movements [illegible] over emphasis [illegible] markets.

W. W. Atterbury

While some of the nation's railways are having a hard time making both ends meet, one or two of the larger systems seem to have been doing fairly well. Pennsylvania Railroad, under the leadership of General W. W. Atterbury, managed to better the showing for the first seven months of 1933 this year. Common stock earnings of 83 cents a share for the period compared with 58 cents last year. For the final five months it is doubted that Pennsylvania will do as well. Restoration of wage cuts, plus pension outlays will contrive, along with a prophesied drop in traffic, to reduce full year close to the figure for the full year 1933.

Comment [illegible] will bring gloom to chart readers generally if it makes 95 flat. Stop loss orders in Steel and Consolidated was went off by the handful as 30 and 25 respectively were touched. As long as Central holds above 19 even all will appear to be well. . . Once [illegible] the watch word will be "careful . . . Air Reduction is the old standby of the faithful longs to date . . . This leader refuses to break down so [illegible] them to [illegible] has successfully [illegible] the market [illegible] too.

Studies of the price movement as measured by the dual averages clearly reveal that the rails are threatening to make the first step to a new low closing since October, 1933. That the carriers have already slipped slightly under the former mark is not of the same importance a low closing a full point under in the eyes of Dow theorists. The industrials as yet do not show the same willingness to reach down under their October figure. And technically a bear market can not be said to rule until both averages close that full point lower.

Shorts: For the industrials the mark is at 82.63 . . . For the rails it is at 32.95 . . . Although we would personally [illegible] be worried if [illegible] under the lows [illegible] early August by the required amount . . . Unless the rails refuse to budge [illegible] from here it is hard [illegible] how some observer [illegible] a possible stopping place . . . [illegible] the present all that anyone may say is that rails are taken well between 33—34 . . . And the same area proved too much for sellers early in August.

From reports of various mercantile agencies and motor dealers it begins to look as though reports of the drouth had been overdrawn. Certainly there is no scarcity of money in the afflicted sections. One summary of the damage done through the Mid West seemingly indicates that corn was the hard hit crop. Other cereals apparently fared about as expected considering the crop destruction program. Such rail reports as have come to hand do not reflect the utter destitution some had come to believe existed.

Wall Streeters Mourn as Market Takes Pounding

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

The market got off to a groggy [illegible] with the new week. The list [illegible] lacing and the scores [illegible] fied to the intensity of the selling and the paucity of buyers.

Speculative sentiment naturally is still in deep mourning" awaiting [illegible] of those dark clouds [illegible]. There is a growing [illegible] a temporary [illegible] far away.

That rebound in U. S. Smelting attracted considerable comment. Particularly since the crack in the stock ten days ago foreshadowed the break in the rest of the list. However, it may be only a one-day wonder, and so far has served merely to bring short covering into the rest of the market.

[illegible] much company for comfort but [illegible] of aggressive buying that the boys are waiting for to try for an advance.

The situation in the bond market is causing more concern than stocks.

Bonds have closed lower every day but one in the last 18 days, and the exception saw prices unchanged . . . since government and other gilt-edge issues have gone along with this trend, it is obvious that any "rescue" efforts will have to manifest themselves here first . . . stocks have usually taken care of themselves in the past, and will do so again when the situation changes . . .

That concentrated selling in the utilities suggests liquidation by trusts or holding companies. The public has avoided power securities for a long time.

BUSINESS MEN IN LOW STATE OF MIND

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

New York, Sept 18—Everyone who is well posted knows business sentiment is very blue—bluer than the Blue Eagle.

The failure of industrial activity to show seasonal gains, the heightened probability of radical experimentation shown by the Maine elections, talk of a universal 30-hour week, the confusion attending the cracking up of NRA, and the decline in stocks and government bonds—all these and more have put the business community in a disturbed and bearish frame of mind.

It is perhaps true, as is often said, that business is better than business sentiment. At least, retail and wholesale trade, and production in a good many light industries are not so bad. It can still be said that in these cases dollar volume is above a year ago.

But this thing called sentiment has its importance, especially when there is as much reason for it as there is now. The plain facts are that trade is not really as good as dollar sales comparisons indicate, and the unfavorable trend of the heavy industries is apt to be the better barometer of the underlying conditions.

The cold facts show that a week ago, which is the latest for which figures are available, industrial activity still pointed down.

Steel production has rebounded a little from its long decline, but is up less than usual for the season, and steel scrap remains weak in price.

The above are the three main weekly barometers, and best show the true trend.

Commodity prices also declined last week for the second week in succession. Items which were lower included grains, cotton, non-ferrous metals, steel scrap, rubber and lard. There were advances, however, in meats, hides and cotton goods.

Metals Feature Dull Curb Dealings

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 18—Metal stocks were again in fair demand on the curb exchange today and after absorbing moderate profit-taking at the start, extended the gains of the previous day to as much as a point. Other sections of the list were slightly irregular, with industrials and specialties pointing upward and utilities narrowly lower. Packing shares attracted a following and were more active than weeks.

Pioneer Gold, which led the metal group in a substantial rally Monday, held the lead again today, and after some irregularity at the start pointed upward in a fairly active market. Wright Hargreaves, silver king coalition and Lake Shore Mines also improved. Sherwin Williams advanced more than a point and Quaker Oats improved nearly as much.

Swift & Co and its foreign associate Swift Interchangeable both were higher after a period of inactivity in recent sessions, and Hiram Walker improved around ½ point. Oil stocks were spotty fractional gains in such issues as International Petroleum, and Creole, being offset by softness of South Pennoil and others.

Electric Bond & Share was slightly higher but American Gas, American Super Power and Niagara Hudson were inclined to sag. United Shoe Machinery lost nearly a point.

Textile Strike Checks Buying In Boston Wool Mart

Effects of the textile strike dominated the Boston wool market during the past week. An occasional mill that continued to operate made some inquiries for wool, but sales resulting from these inquiries were insignificant in volume. Quotations on domestic wools, therefore, were almost entirely nominal.

A few inquiries were made on medium quality fleeces. Bids were made on country packed lots of 48s, 50s, ¼ blood, wools with combing and clothing staple together, which figured slightly under 50c, scoured basis. Other grades of fleeces were mostly quiet. Quotations were steady but they were regarded in the trade as not very firm in view of the extremely quiet demand that was continued for several weeks.

Graded and original bag lines of Western grown wools in Boston were quiet and quotations were unchanged. Small lots of wool offered direct from Texas were reported to have been sold at around 60c scoured basis for ordinary 12 months wools. Prices were reported firmer in Texas and some houses figured the prices at which good to choice 12 months wools were held in country to be around 63-65c, scoured basis, delivered to Eastern points.

Wool prices at sales in Australia opened lower at the beginning of the week and showed a further decline later, according to cable reports to private concerns in Boston. Good combing 64s and 64s, 70s, Australian wools, were offered for import at 77-82c, scoured basis, landed Boston, duty paid.

The market for woolen wools was very restricted with demand mostly limited to a few grades of scoured pulled wools. A limited quantity of AAs were sold at prices ranging from 75-78c, and a few fine As around 70-72c. Some choice white Bs moved at 57-59c. B supers were quoted around 53-55c and some gray Bs were reported sold around 50c. Noils were mostly quiet with fine noils quoted mostly from 47-52c, and ⅜ noils 42-45c.

Carpet wools were not very active, although a few sales were reported at firm prices.

The closing of many spinning mills, as a result of the strike, has brought business in the top market almost to a standstill. The volume of the few pieceing out orders for tops was extremely small, and these small purchases comprised practically all the deliveries during the past week. Most of the spinners that had been taking deliveries against old contracts quite regularly withheld further specifications.

DROP IN STOCKS SEEN BLOW TO SENTIMENT

This is disconcerting.

After all, a very large part of America's possessions are in the form of stocks and bonds—railway, utility, industrial, mining, oil, bank, chain, mail-order and other stores, real estate, etc.

B. C. Forbes

When [illegible] market value of securities shrinks [illegible] millions of families in America [illegible] directly affected. When an individual's or a family's investments shrivel 50 per cent, the sentimental consequences are very depressing. When money must be raised, it necessitates, under such circumstances, the sale of twice as many shares or bonds to realize a given sum.

Consider what has happened to securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange alone. During the boom—just five years ago—they reached an aggregate quoted total of almost $90,000,000,000. At the beginning of this month their value had tumbled to less than $33,000,000,000. And since then there has been an almost uninterrupted downtrend, until yesterday a new low level for 1934 was reached.

In my humble opinion, President Roosevelt could arrest this dangerous downswing by coming out with a frank statement that he realizes the imperative importance of taking steps to restore a larger measure of confidence among employing and investing classes.

Unless business and industry and employment can be increased, the New Deal inevitably will fizzle. The Government by and of itself cannot permanently fill an adequate number of pay envelopes no matter what taxes it may levy, for, without reasonable employment and profits adequate collections will be impossible.

Will President Roosevelt rise to the occasion?

Although they are only a few weeks off, November elections are exciting extraordinarily little conversation. Apparently it is taken for granted that President Roosevelt will have a Democratic Congress. [illegible] is doubted whether the next Congress will be [illegible] to be used more as a rubber stamp.

Cheerful news comes from America's three [illegible] motor manufacturers. Chrysler [illegible] breaking all [illegible] records. Chrysler's Dodge ditto. And Fords are selling to the tune of thousands daily. High-priced cars are not doing well.

The threat of a municipal tax on gross business done in New York City has caused at least one nationally-known concern to engage quarters in Jersey and to inform employes of one subsidiary to be prepared to work there. Flights from taxes are likely to become numerous not only in New York, but from other cities or states which run amuck taxwise.

FirmnessMarks Quiet Bond Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 18—The bond market had a somewhat stiffer tone today following sagging tendencies in recent sessions. Trading in the general corporate list and in U. S. governments was relatively quiet.

The federal list showed uneven price changes. Treasury 3¼s, of 1941-43, 3⅛s of 1941-43, Federal Farm 3s and the Liberty issues worked a point higher. Other quotations were unchanged to 3-32ds of a point lower.

Some of the rail, utility and industrial liens attracted a little buying interest and prices pushed up fractions to a point. Over the entire list, however, there were plain indications that investment inquiry was still extremely languid.

There were moderate gains in Santa Fe 4s, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s, Chile Copper 5, Erie 5s, National Dairy Products 5¼s, PPacific Gas & Electric 5s, Postal Telegraph 5s, and Shell Union Oil 5s.

Dealings in such issues as Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, Consolidated Gas 5½s, International Telephone 5s, North American 5s, Phillips PePtProleum 5¼s, Southern Railway 4s, Texas Corp 5s and United Drug 5s were effected at lower levels.

SHARE MARKET SAGS IN LATE DEALINGS

New York, Sept. 18—The stock market sagged in the late dealings today, after rallying 1 to more than 2 points in the forenoon, as the Securities and Exchange Commission paid a visit to the floor to find out how the trading machinery worked.

Steels and rails set the pace for the recovery. Later, recent selling of the U. S. Steel issues was resumed and this checked the recovery.

GOOD NEWS AIDS

Steel common was up a point and the preferred more than 2 points, at one time, but the gains were cut later. Union Pacific was the best of the rails, with a 2-point spurt, reflecting a good August earnings report.

Both industries wer aided by better news, with steel operations improving and railroad traffic rebounding from the Labor Day week decline.

Some restraint was brought about by heavy selling of United Aircraft, which broke to anew 1934 low, and pressure on some of the sugars. UUnited Gas Improvement also was heavy, but other utilities showed less pressure than in recent sessions.

Bonds rallied for the first time in more than two wekes. The dollar was firm. Commodities were upset by weakness in grains.

BONDS STUDIED

Aside from labor uncertainties and industrial problems, the financial disric twas paying more attention than usual to the movements of listed bonds.

Banking circles were pleased by the announcement of the Treasury that some $530,000,000 of the $1,250,000,000 of called Liberty Fourth 4¼s had already been exchanged for the new 3¼ per cent bonds or 2½ per cent notes. On the basis of these figures it was felt that the conversion was meeting with considerable more success than had been expected in view of the recent weakness of U. S. government securities.

The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of weekly reporting member banks, as of September 12, showed a further gain in "all other," or commercial loans, of $14,000,000, bringing the total up to $4,693,000,000. The statement also disclosed increases of $23,000,000 in loans and investments, $93,000,000 in net demand deposits and $15,000,000 in reserve balances with reserve banks. Loans on securities were off $48,000,000.

A gain of insolvencies for the week ended Sept. 13 was reported by Dun & Bradstreet. During that period there were 199 commercial failures throughout the country compared with 174 in the previous week and 275 a year ago.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

Shields & Co.—With no change of importance ahead in general business the market will be left without sufficient stimulus to change its character for an indefinite period.

Soucy Swartsweiter & Co.—While the market is undoubtedly accumulating technical strength we believe the conservative policy is to assume that this strength will not be exploited beyond minor proportions unless there is an important news development to precipitate a wave of concentrated buying.

E. A. Pierce & Co.—Stock market in all probability has discounted the steady disappearance of third quarter earnings hopes, but obviously needs evidence that the final quarter of the year will reveal something in the way of business improvement, that is to say, improvement on a comparative basis.

Stock Market Time Table

10-11—Shares were gradually firm in first hour dealings. Strength was noted in the metals although U. S. Smelting lost a point. Rails were firm and oils were steady. Trading was dull with sales running 150,000 shares.

11-12—Firmness continued in the second hour with most groups holding. Merchandisers moved higher and packers showed quiet strength. Transactions approximated 260,000 share.

12-1—Gains were extended in third hour dealings. Packers and metals were strong. Chemicals worked higher. Rails were steady. Trading was quiet with sales amounting to 330,000 shares.

WOOL TRADING IS SMALL

The extremely small amount of business transacted in Boston on domestic wools during recent weeks has afforded such a limited basis for determining market values of wool that more than the usual interest is being shown in foreign markets. Members of the Boston wool trade therefore, are looking forward with considerable interest to the London auctions and further openings in Australia scheduled for this week.

Estimated receipts of domestic wools at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain & Flour Exchange during the week ending September 15, amounted to 964,300 lbs., compared with 838,800 lbs. during the previous week.

Imports of greasy combing wool at Boston during the week ending September 15 consisted of 1750 lbs. of 50s,56s from England and 1552 lbs. of not finer than 40s from Wales. No imports of greasy combing wools were reported at New York or Philadelphia.

Gain Recorded in U. S. Gold Stock

Daily statement of New York Federal Reserve Bank to 3 p. m. Monday shows a gain of $350,000 in monetary gold stock as result of a new decrease in gold held under earmark for foreign account. There were no exports or imports.

Gold to amount of $230,000 was reported received at San Francisco from China.

Auto Sales Higher in Year

Estimated passenger car sales for August have been lowered to 195,000 units by R. L. Polk & Co., on basis of reports from 20 states representing 22.77 per cent of United States.

Passenger car registrations in these states totaled 45,331 units, off 15.21 per cent from July total of 53,461, but 11.26 per cent greater than August 1933, registrations.

August truck and commercial car registrations are estimated at 36,000 by Polk on reports from 20 states representing 30.47 per cent of the country. There were 10,815 trucks and commercial cars registered in these states in August, a gain of 1 than 1 per cent over July registrations, but 2. per cent over August, 1933.

Rail and Equipment Orders

The Cincinnati, New Orleans, Texas & Pacific has ordered 2000 tons of rails from Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.

Atchison Loadings Higher

Atchison's own line loadings in week ended September 15 showed a seasonal increase over the level of the past several weeks, but the rate of gain over a year ago was smaller, 10 per cent, against 17.9 per cent in week ended September 6.

Steel Ingot Production

Steel ingot production for the week beginning September 17 is indicated at 22.3 per cent of capacity, says American Iron & Steel Institute. This compares with 20.9 per cent a week ago and represents an increase of 1.4 points or 6.7 per cent.

This is the second consecutive weekly increase following seven weeks of decreases. A month ago the industry was at 21.3 per cent.

Atlantic Coast Line

Atlantic Coast Line Railroad reports for seven months ended July 31, 1934, surplus of $1,274,483 after taxes and charges, equal, after dividend requirements on the 5 per cent preferred, to $1.55 a share on the 823,427 shares of common, against deficit of $299,309 in first seven months of 1933.

OIL PRODUCTION IS HIGHER

By Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 18—A general upward trend over the United States brought crude oil production from 2,491,479 to 2,590,876 barrels a day last week, the Oil and Gas Journal says.

California where there was an 8600-barrell drop, was the only one of the three major areas to cut output.

In Kansas there was an increase from 120,900 to 126,585 barrels; the Eastern area produced 133,576 barrels as compared with a previous average of 133,117 barrels; and in the Rocky Mountains, production dropped from 96,900 to 95,370 barrels.

Western Pacific Interest Plan

Formal announcement was made by the Western Pacific Railroad Company today that the plan for extension of interest paymenth maturing in 1934, as modified on July 25, has become effective. Holders of more than 75 per cent in amount of the outstanding first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, due 1946, have consented to the extension.

Bondholders who have executed the modified agreements of extension of intrest may no longer withdraw coupons. Stamped coupons will be available for delivery in the near future.

CHARLIE OFFERS EVEN MONEY HE RIDES 'ER

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

Charlie Endicott is going to ride a tough western horse, just south of the Frisco stockyards, and he wants to bet everybody that comes to see him turn the trick at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon 25 cents that he rides it.

Here's his proposition: Pay 25 cents to get into the pacture, south of the stockyards, here I'm going to do the riding. If I ride the horse, I'll keep your quarter. If I don't I'll give everybody back hi money.

The horse is about eight years old, and was never touched by bridle or saddle.

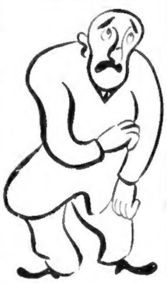
ROMANCE OF THE BUSINESS WORLD



In these hectic times many of us are too busy with our own selfish big individual problems to speak a word of cheer or admiration for the other fellow's little triumph. Wouldn't it be better to pause when we meet a tycoon and tip the hat in recognition of what he has accomplished, even though his motives seem obscure? We think so. And that is why, today, we go to all this trouble to say a word for B. Bittinger Doakes—the man who put over cellophane. If it wasn't for "B. B." you wouldn't get any cellophane in those crabmeat cocktails they serve with six-bit dinners!

X-RAY

Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before Sept. 23rd. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in chronic diseases. No matter what your disease, remember Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

Grateful Mother

This is to certify that my son, Earl W. Hodgdon, at the age of 7 was pronounced by several doctors to have Tuberculosis and they gave little hope for him. I had you treat him for a few months and then his school called for a health certificate. He was examined at the Mass. General Hospital and he was pronounced free from all Tubercular symptoms and all diseased spots healed. Returned to school and has never had a return of his former trouble. He is now 32 years old, married and has two healthy children and is in the best of health; thanks to you. You may use this letter for publication in hope it will help others who suffer as my son suffered. Signed, Mrs. Anne L. Hodgdon, 275 Rock Island Road, Quincy, Mass.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Curley Rouses Voters to High Enthusiasm

ENTHUSIASM for the nomination of James M. Curley, former Mayor of Boston, as gubernatorial candidate on the Democratic ticket is blazing throughout the Commonwealth.

Curley rallies are marked by a warmth of greeting and followed by a fervor for the candidate that have never been exceeded in the political history of the Bay State.

The primary system of making nominations for major political offices was first tried out in Suffolk County, and later expanded to include the rest of the State.

It was designed to enable the people to express THEIR will, unhampered by the dictates of would-be political bosses.

Previously, conventions had been notoriously BOSS-RIDDEN. The result had been that the people at the polls were compelled to choose between candidates NOT of their own picking.

This year the people of Massachusetts propose to nominate their own candidates, both Republican and Democrat.

They want a man who knows how to meet all emergencies, as James Michael Curley did when Mayor of Boston.

Mr. Curley meets all the requirements.

When Mr. Curley receives the Democratic nomination and when he is elected Governor we will be ASSURED of the leadership we need to make further progress on the road to recovery.

And Mr. Average Citizen will be given a FAIR DEAL.

Coast Guard on Job

The tragedy of the Morro Castle, by its very horror, throws into strong relief the great achievements of one organization which sleeplessly watches the safety of ships in American waters—the United States Coast Guard.

Heavy as the loss of life aboard the ill-fated liner was, the public will learn with keen admiration that in the year ended June 30, the Coast Guard actually saved 5762 men, women and children from possible deaths at sea.

In the last five years it has performed a like service for 29,009.

Judged by these figures it must rank as one of the most effective life-saving agencies in the world.

The Coast Guard has also salvaged, in a single year, vessels worth fifty million dollars. Though most of its rescues are not spectacular, it has never failed to meet the challenge of sudden emergency, and to give the aid which was to be expected of an organization old in service and strong in tradition.

The American people are proud of the Coast Guard, and rightly.

Business Beckons

Opportunity is knocking at the door for the aggressive Yankee trader and manufacturer. Trade agreements are being fostered with all the nations of the globe.

New customers, new markets beckon to the wideawake New England industrialist. The United States Department of Commerce is doing its part to build up foreign trade.

Harold M. Randall, assistant commercial attache, Santiago, Chile, is at the Boston Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Mr. Randall is prepared to answer the problems of New England business men interested in, or doing business with Chile. A half-hour appointment may be had by communicating with the bureau.

Do it. New markets, new customers may be had by answering the knock of opportunity. The fruits of success are always property of the well informed.

Bankers to Meet

The Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League starts a three-day session at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, on Wednesday. President Raymond P. Harold believes thrifty people, who save money instead of squandering it, should NOT be penalized by excessive taxation.

"Soaking the thrifty," which appears to be the slogan of some of the tax devisers of today, may fall into further disrepute as the result of the Swampscott bankers' gathering. Says Mr. Harold:

> "The upward trend in real estate taxes must be stopped or many communities will face bankruptcy."

We commend to the attention of this banking body the fact that one SURE FIRE way to stop the rise in realty taxes is to eliminate useless public expenditures. Trimming down the county governments would be the best starter.

Fitzgerald Is Active

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, ceaseless campaigner for a "bigger, better and busier Boston," is very much on the job. At the national meeting of port directors in New York last week "Honey Fitz" told them all about what Boston Harbor would be, provided Pennsylvania Railroad and other influences gave it a fair chance.

Joseph B. Eastman, so-called "Railroad Czar," was at the same time scored by our ex-Mayor for not naming a Bostonian on the co-ordination committee.

As Mr. Eastman is a Bostonian, we feel sure he knows without our telling him that "John F." would be a mighty fine addition to the committee mentioned. IF he would take the position.

A Real American

Henry G. Houghton, 26-year-old Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist, won world renown last July when he demonstrated he could drive away fog with his calcium chloride-spurting invention.

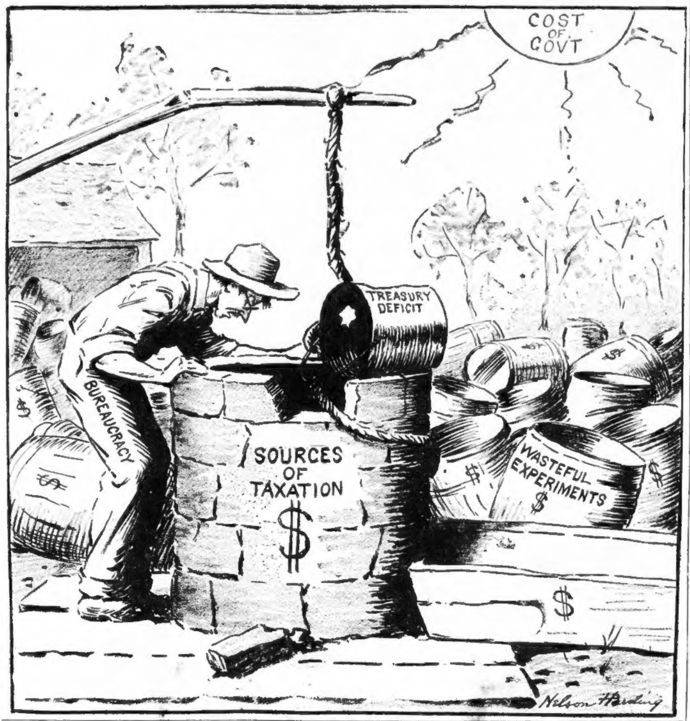
The young fog killer is a real American. This was demonstrated recently when he refused an offer to visit London and see what he could do about dispersing the fog there.

He prefers to continue his experiments in the Bay State, on the estate of Colonel E. H. R. Green, son of the late Hetty Green, woman Croesus of her day.

Colonel Green is known as a friend of scientists. The inventions produced at his "Round Hill" estate will help America first, the rest of the world afterward.

The Next Great Drouth?

By Nelson Harding



Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

WOMEN ARE THE RESTLESS SEX

Men make a big mistake
About women.
Men think that women
Are timid home-bodies.
Who like to stick
In one place
And work at one job.

* * *

Men realize, of course,
That some women
Are always gadding.
But they don't believe
That's woman's normal nature.
"Women," they say,
"Who act like that
"Are wild or man crazy.
"Nice, normal women
"Like to stay settled."

Elsie Robinson

* * *

And so
Men are bewildered
About women—lately.
They can't understand
All this restlessness
And rebellion—
This wanting To Go Places
And Do Things—
This clamor for careers
Men can't understand
What's come over women,
Or happened to them,
To make them act like this.

* * *

But nothing
Has come over women,
Or happened to them
Women are just acting
The way they always Wanted to act—
And now's their chance.

* * *

Women never were
The meek-mousies
Men thought they were—
Women always have been
The restless sex!
That doesn't mean they're bad,
Or unreliable,
Any more than it means
That men are bad or unreliable
Just because they'd rather
Go down to the office
Than stay home
And shell peas.
It just means that women
Are naturally
As restless as men.

* * *

Women always did
Want to be on the go.
That's how they lived
When the race started—
Out on the trail
Following the hunters
And the warriors;
Carrying babies and baskets
And camp gear—
Working in squads—
Making homes and moving them
To new places
Every little while.
That was the way
The first women lived
That is the way
Women like to live.

* * *

Then men left the trails—
Made homes—
And somebody had to Keep those homes.
So men decided
Home Was Woman's Sphere—
But they never Took a straw vote
From the ladies!

* * *

Women always knew
That talk was all "baloney"!
Women always knew
They liked best
To be Gypsies—
And were always mad as hops
Because the men
Spoiled their chance!

* * *

I'm fifty-one
And, in all my life,
I haven't known
A dozen women
Who really preferred
Staying home.
Most of them
Wanted to marry
And have husbands
And babies,
But they wanted to do it
On the hoof.

* * *

I grin
When I hear people say
How brave it was for women
To follow their men
In Covered Wagons.
S'matter of fact
It took a lot more courage
To stay home
In a covered house—
Seeing the same old things,
Doing the same old chores—
Than it did to go off
With that whoopee crowd
In a covered wagon.
Yes, the old-fashioned home
Was a great institution,
But don't kid yourself
That it came natural for women.
And now it's gone—
We haven't the price
Nor the space any more
For that old-fashioned home—
And men have grabbed
The housekeeping jobs
And turned them into Big Business.
So what's a lively woman
Going to do nowadays,
After she's tidied up
Her one room apartment?
She's going to do
What she always wanted to do—
She's going to Go Gadding.

* * *

She won't call it that.
She'll call it
Getting a Job, or Having a Career, or Going in for Club Work,
Or Civic Improvement,
Or Politics—or somethin'.
But it will all amount
To the same thing in the end;
It will all amount to
JUST GADDING.

* * *

And THEN what?
What'll the world do,
What'll the race do,
What'll the babies do
With all these
Restless, rebellious,
Excited, unhappy,
Fidgety Females
Milling around—
Wanting something,
Never knowing
What it is?

* * *

What'll happen then?
I don't know,
But I will bet you this—
Something will happen,
And it will be PLENTY!

Mary's Problem -:- By Winifred Black

Mary-Mary, quite contrary, is going down south to the old plantation.

Winifred Black

She's heard about it all her life, has Mary-Mary.

She's read books about old southern plantations, and she's heard her mother talk about grapes and what delicious wines you make of them and she's crazy to hear the cotton pickers singing in the fields and she does so want to listen to the mocking birds.

There's a big white house on the old plantation.

The big house, the colored people call it, and it stands on a high hill, and you can look out from the galleries and see the river sparkling in the sunshine.

There are great halls in the big house, thirty feet long and twelve feet wide and nobody knows how high—that's for coolness and there's a fireplace in every one of the great rooms — that's for warmth, and there are great trees all around the house—that's for shade.

And there's a rose garden full of roses, and the cape jasmine is too fragrant for words, and the magnolia trees are lovely in the moonlight, and there's a kind of leisure and space about living down on the old plantation.

And Mary-Mary is just simply crazy to go and be a part of it all.

She'll sleep in the room where her great-great-grandmother was born—yes and in the same bed, too, and everybody in the county will know just exactly who she is and what kin she is to Miss Sallie and Mr Jim. And, they'll tell her tales about her great Aunt Mary and show her grandmother's portrait and tell her she's going to look exactly like her when she grows up to be a belle—and I can hardly wait for Mary-Mary to go down to the old plantation for a long visit and hurry home and tell me all about it.

I do hope she'll be very, very happy there and I don't see how she can help from being, but still—

I wonder if you can be brought up in the mad-house of a great, hurrying, scurrying, roaring, wait-till-I-catch-you city and be really contented and happy on a quiet plantation, without a picture show within twenty miles and only one or two parties a month.

HOW ABOUT CLOTHES?

And how about the clothes? Will Mary-Mary like to wear the same kind of dress each day, the way so many of the pretty girls on the other plantations do—they always look like pictures no matter what they wear?

Will Mary-Mary pick up the trick of that, do you think?

Or will she be lonely for the noise and the excitement and the confusion of the big, noisy, confused city?

Dear Mary-Mary, she'll look very little indeed in those great big rooms, won't she—I wonder if she will feel sort of small and unimportant and dwarfed by the calm and the quiet and the dignity of it all?

Anyhow I wish I were Mary-Mary going on my first visit to my great - great - grandfather's plantation, going from way up north down to way down south, with all my ideas and my ways to make over.

MOTHER DREAM

This is her dream. Some day that she Shall hear of him a happy word,
That strangers in his life shall see
The things by which her breast is stirred.

He is too young to understand
The hopes that she has cherished long,
Yet all her future years are planned
To have him true and brave and strong.

And all her joy is ventured here
That when to manhood he has grown,
The world shall recognize and cheer
The worth which she so long has known.

This is her dream. That she may share
A mother's greatest hour of joy
And hear some other voice declare

Human Side of the News; $100,000 for a Violin

By Edwin C. Hill

A Boston woman has paid a fine price, possibly $100,000, for one of the 400 violins in existence which bear the name of the maker, Antonio Stradivari.

Every now and then the "discovery" of a Stradivarius is reported from some garret or warehouse, only to have the experts shatter the dreams of the finder with the verdict that the violin is only a copy or a counterfeit.

There has not been a genuine find in 80 years, and the whereabouts of the real ones are known, from the $150,000 Messiah Stradivarius in the British Museum all the way down the list through the other 399.

The violin maker of Cremona lived 65 years, from 1664 to 1729, and at the height of his career was a stern-looking man of the Cromwellian type, with dark eyes and flowing hair. All told he modeled and varnished 1900 violins, and set up his craftsmanship and that of Cremona as the model for all time.

Those that remain in the hands of the music masters or in the vaults of the collectors today would bring in the aggregate about $20,000,000.

SECRET OF VIOLIN

Twentieth century science is constantly probing into the seventeenth century craftsmanship, seeking to learn the secret of the quality of the Stradivarius. Toscha Seidel, the violinist, submitted his instrument to tests by Dr. William B. White and photographs of the sound waves showed the Stradivarius triumphant in the most severe tests of modern acoustics.

Dr. White and Seidel decided that the secret of the Stradivarius was the simplicity and symmetry of its fundamental vibrations, and this, in turn, they concluded, was the result of Stradivari's slow and patient construction, his exquisite tonal sense and the mellowing of time.

A common belief through the past two centuries has been that Stradivari possessed a secret formula for varnish, and that therein was the reason for the superb quality of his violins. He did have the formula, and no one has been able to duplicate the orange-red, soft coating which he gave to the wood.

However, they put one of his instruments under the X-ray at Purdue University recently, and the findings there seem to explode the theory that it was all a matter of varnish.

SOME FINER VIOLINS

The Indiana professors discovered that the top part of the violin was of a material in which the fibre structure was almost completely gone and the crystallites of cellulose in the wood were distributed at random.

Their verdict was that it was the selection of the proper type of wood—spruce for the front and maple for the back—and not any special treatment of the wood, or varnish, or age.

As rare and as rich as is a violin made by Stradivari, there are others by craftsmen of the Cremona school which are held in as high repute. His pupil, Guarnerius del Jesu, produced an instrument which was preferred before the master's by the great Paganini.

A Guarnerius today fetches as much as $100,000, and there are also the violins of Carlo Bergonzi, which the celebrated Belgian player Ysaye said were finer than those of Stradivari.

* * *

Graeco-Roman architecture is all right to house and administer the codes of Justinian, but when the government gets into business, public buildings must become business-like structures. This seems to be the logic of Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that the old mausoleum type of post office is out.

The new ones will be snappy business structures, designed for efficiency, economy, general all-around utility in dispatching government business, and the incidental aesthetic integrity which comes from utility.

Under both President Hoover and President Roosevelt, other public buildings have gone a long way in this direction, and it may be that one of the by-products of these chaotic years will be the wreck of many of those gloomy old monstrosities, mongrels most of them, and the substitution of something all our own. Maybe we're headed for an aesthetic as well as an economic "autarchy."

One often wonders why America, with its fine colonial beginnings, got so desperately fouled up with extraneous fixings and old moth-eaten tradition in developing both its public and private architecture. It seems that much of this ugliness must have resulted either from evil premeditation or high-proof liquor, but probably not.

We were feeling our oats in those days, and somehow we just had to drag in everything lying around loose. It was a grand free-for-all, with no hard-boiled de Medici to summon a Michele Angelo or Leonardo da Vinci, have them fix up a unified plan and put it over.

DELICATE SUBJECT

This is, of course, a delicate subject to broach to any taxpayer, but if he will look around a bit he will find that for a great many decades he has been paying, not only for ugliness, but for flagrant and irretrievable waste. Any architect will tell you that these big, smeary, depressing, slate-gray federal dinosaurs—aesthetically as extinct as the diplodocus—represent just about fifty per cent waste, aside from their being eyesores.

They have a corridor big enough to hold a three-ring circus. In the feudal tradition they have walls about three times as thick as necessary. They frequently are designed without regard to easy and free access, and there is huddle and confusion instead of the easy flow of business which marks a properly designed business building.

The Recovery Race

These tell-tale figures are contained in the Monthly Bulletin of Statistics for August, issued by the League of Nations.

They record the industrial production of fifteen countries, which include all the countries we regard as commercial competitors with ourselves, and a number of smaller countries the effects of whose competition have not been felt severely by the United States in years gone by.

What do we find?

JAPAN leads the world, with a rate of industrial production amounting to 140 per cent of its rate in the year 1928, which is the basis of calculation.

Then come Chile, Norway and Sweden, in the order named, followed by Great Britain, whose industrial production in August was 103 per cent.

Great Britain is followed by Hungary, Germany, Italy, Canada and France, all of whom show a higher industrial production and a greater progress in recovery than the United States.

Then comes the United States, whose production is only 77 per cent of the 1928 standard—77 per cent as compared with 88 per cent for hard-pressed Germany, and 103 per cent for Great Britain, wisely piloted and maturely guided by her men of knowledge and experience—not inexperienced Brain Trusters, with their silly and ruin-fraught improvisations in economics and finance.

A sad showing! Even worse than the showing of some months ago!

CANNOT somebody stop it? Arrest the follies that are being palmed off on us as "government" and "leadership" before it is too late and while there is something left on which to build back to sanity?

> "We want practical men at the head of business and industry," said Mr. Hearst in words that came to us over the radio recently, "particularly at the head of the nation's business.
> "After the visionary theorists have exhausted the Treasury and destroyed our credit, we will have to spend the rest of our lives paying for their failure.
>

When will the Administration realize the wisdom of these words and have done with its clap-trap demagogy and punitive hostility to all business?

Its suicidal course, if not checked, will destroy not only all rational hope of business revival—but will make recovery an impossibility.
